Bloody 9-Day War In Jordan Is Over

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan and Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasir Arafat agreed today to end the bloody nine-day civil war in Jordan and Sudanese officers were assigned to help police the truce.

President Jaafar el Numairi of Sudan, who led the negotiations to end the fighting, announced over Amman radio that a team of Sudanese officers was going to Irbid to "arrange for the return of normal life." Irbid, 50 miles north of Amman, has been the scene of heavy fighting.

Hostages Freed

The agreement by Hussein, Arafat and Numairi was announced on Amman radio. Only Wednesday, Arafat, head of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, had vowed to keep on fighting.

In another development, Habis Majali, Jordan's military governor, reported that 15 of 54 hijacked airline passengers held hostage by the guerrillas had been freed by Jordan's army. They were eight Britons, five Swiss and two West Germans. All but one of the 39 hostages still held are believed to be Americans.

Numairi read this message from Arafat over Amman radio: Masses of our great people, our brave revolutionaries—In order to avoid more innocent bloodshed and so that the citizens may be able to take care of their wounded and buy necessary foodstuffs, in my capacity of supreme commander of the Palestinian revolutionary forces . . . I agree to the ceasefire and order all the forces of the Palestinian revolution to stop firing at once. We are committed to this decision as long as the other side does the same."

Hussein's orders to his armed forces said: "In compliance with my cease-fire orders and after leaders of the commando movement have emphasized their readiness to completely observe the cease-fire, I repeat my order to the Jordanian armed forces to immediately and totally cease firing. . .

"We have accepted the agreement proposed by some of the guerrilla leaders to end the current crisis after it was approved by the delegation of Arab Kings and presidents."

This was a reference to Numairi's peace mission.

The agreement followed reports on Cairo Radio that Numairi met with Arafat early today. On Wednesday Arafat had spurned a cease-fire reached between Hussein and two captured guerrilla leaders.

Field Marshal Majali said the freed airline passengers "are now in army hands preparatory to their delivery to their home countries."

He did not say how they were freed from the guerrillas.

Originally, there were some 400 hostages, from three planes hijacked to the Jordanian desert Sept. 6 and 9. Most of the hostages were released earlier. The planes were blown up.

The guerrillas have demanded the release of Palestinian commandos jailed in Britain, West Germany, Switzerland and Israel as ransom for the hostages.

Issue Orders

Majali and Hussein both issued orders over Amman Radio for their troops to abide by the cease-fire after reports of more fighting around Irbid in northern Jordan.

Arafat said the guerrillas would abide by the cease-fire as long as the army did the same. Arafat has not agreed to any of the previous cease-fires an-

3 Suspects Are Set Free By Authorities

Young Musicians Found Not to be Madison Bombers

HILLSBORO, Tex. (AP) — Three young men, heading to their new home in Killeen, got a lengthy detour to the Hillsboro jail Thursday before being cleared in a bombing that killed one person and injured three others at the University of Wisconsin.

Authorities held the three hippie-style musicians for about six hours, then released them after agreeing that wanted posters picturing four youths sought for the bombing last month did not match any of them.

County, state and federal officials were involved, but authorities later said there was some confusion about who ordered their arrest.

Leaving the confusion behind, Monty Fox, 17, of Santa Cruz, Calif.; John Long, 17, of Colorado Springs. Colo., and Ron Olsen, 20, of Milwaukee, Wis., wondered if they made a wise choice in their new home.

"We all officially moved to Texas three weeks ago," said Olsen, was fined $20 for not having a driver's license.

Did he and his companions have any idea why they were stopped?

"Well, John was supposed to look identical to one of the bombers," Fox said. "And the car was supposed to be identical to the getaway car used by the bombers."

"But we didn't know why they were holding us until about three hours later," Olsen said. "They finally just asked us if we knew any of the people in the pictures of the accused bombers. Then they finally let us go."

They left town in a beat-up 1953 car for Killeen, where they said they planned to find jobs.

Cambodians Press on To Split Enemy Force

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Cambodian troops attempting to cut in two a powerful enemy force 47 miles north of Phnom Penh moved to within about a mile of a link-up early today, reliable sources said.

But North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops continued to pour in mortar fire on the newly reinforced government troops, who are attempting to smash an enemy strong point that has stalled Cambodia's first major action of the war for nearly two weeks.

Reports from the field said the government now has more than two divisions of infantry in the battle zone at the village of Taing Kuk. Four fresh battalions reportedly arrived Thursday after the enemy beat back an attempt Wednesday to capture the town.

Cambodian officers said they were certain of victory now that they have a force six times or so larger than the enemy force believed to be in the area. However, government troops were still moving gingerly, mindful of serious casualties to several government battalions in the fighting so far.

One Cambodian element fought its way into the western outskirts of the village Thursday, the Cambodian command reported, and it was toward this force that the eastern element was reported moving.

But the distance still separating them was said to include several hundred enemy troops of the regimental-sized force believed somewhere in the area.

Earlier Thursday, Cambodian troops drove a wedge into the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong force but were halted by well-dug-in enemy positions.

New Drug Bill Passed by House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed a broad narcotics control bill giving agents and judges more power while reducing the penalty for possessing a drug for personal use.

The bill eliminates all mandatory minimum sentences for controlled drugs and brings in rehabilitation and research features under a $403 million, three-year program.

A 340-6 vote Thursday sent the measure to the Senate which last January passed a more limited version.

No-Knock Backed

In some instances the bill exceeds Nixon administration proposals in the drug portion of its anticrime package.

However, the no-knock authority for narcotics agents and the new judicial authority both had administration backing.

The no-knock section, which allows agents under some circumstances to enter a home unannounced, was in the Senate bill. Similar language giving judges power to boost penalties after conviction in certain cases is included in separate pending crime bills.

The House bill also includes a spending ceiling of $6 million in each of the three years to hire an additional 300 narcotics agents. The administration hadn't sought it nor was it in the Senate bill.

The package covers barbiturates, amphetamines, hallucinogens, tranquilizers and marijuana and includes a section to control imports and exports of such hard narcotics as heroin.

It would reduce from a felony to a misdemeanor illegal possession of controlled drugs by an individual for his own use. Otherwise, possesion would remain a felony.

Term Mandatory

A sentence of 10 years to life would be mandatory for organized pushers.

But, with solid Republican backing, Rep. Richard H. Poff, R-Va., added authority for the judge to levy sentences up to 25 years for special dangerous offenders even though lower terms were imposed after conviction. His amendment was approved on a 147-61 nonrecord vote.

Lightning Started Fire in Which 5 Persons Died

COLUMBUS, Wis. (AP) — The state fire marshal's office said today it had determined that lighting caused the fire that swept through a rural Dodge County home near midnight Wednesday, claiming five lives.

Frank Roberts, assistant fire marshal, said his investigation showed a passing motorist saw lightning strike the house during a thunderstorm.

He added the motorist drove in the yard, blew the horn on his car, then pounded on the door but was unable to arouse occupants.

The motorist, Roberts said, drove to Columbus to summon help. Roberts said the man was unable to break into the house because of his physical condition. He underwent open heart surgery a year ago.

Students to Plea For Hostages

MADISON (AP)—The Wisconsin Student Association is making a plea for the immediate release of a University of Wisconsin student among Mideast airplane hijack hostages.

The association said today it has a petition containing 600 signatures to be sent to Jordanian authorities.

The petition asks the release of Mark Shain, 20, a UW junior from Shorewood, and more than 50 other passengers being held captive by Palestinian guerrillas.

Legal Lottery Offers $1 Million

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state Tax Department found the million-dollar summer lottery such a "runaway success" that it has decided to hold another this year.

Acting Tax Commissioner Norman Gallman announced Thursday that another batch of $3 tickets would be sold between Oct. 1 and Dec. 31 with the top prize again $1 million.

The department initiated the million-dollar lottery last June as an added means of raising money for education.

Sales which ended Sept. 15 "far exceeded our most optimistic expectations," Gallman said. He predicted they would top $10 million although exact figures were not available.

In the state's regular monthly lottery, with $1 tickets and top prize of $100,000, sales have averaged between $3 million and $4 million. Its proceeds also go for education.

Drawings for the summer special will be conducted Oct. 8 in New York City.

Shoving Match at Waupaca

Deer Hunters Rambunctious

The adrenaline flowed a little prematurely among a group of Waupaca County deer hunters waiting Thursday morning for party tags.

The weary and rain-soaked hunters — some had waited 18 hours — vented their anger in a free-for-all, after conservation wardens decided not to honor a priority list the hunters had devised for themselves.

A similar gathering formed in front of the Outagamie County Courthouse in Appleton for the annual issuance of party tags, which allow a party of hunters to shoot a doe in buck territory. Wardens feared trouble might develop as the number of permits dwindled, but nothing happened.

The trouble stemmed from the fact that the state decided this year to issue fewer than one-third of the number of party permits issued last year. It took the action in response to hunters' claims that there weren't enough deer to go around last year. The result was an oversupply of hunters Thursday and an undersupply of permits.

The lineup of Waupaca hunters at the armory grew from the first arrivals at 7 p.m. Wednesday to upwards of 300 by midmorning. Those in line started their own numbering system, signing their names and taking consecutive numbers.

A camaraderie developed as hunters exchanged tidbits of information about themselves, their interests and hunting exploits. But this was to disappear when they were told two minutes before the doors were to open at 1 p.m., that "no numbers list" would be honored. The mood changed and hunters began jostling and elbowing, as late-arrivers sought to get near the three-door armory.

Muscle and bravado reigned, as the good guys — those who didn't force their way to the front — found themselves left out. Several wardens and city policemen manned the entrance, alternating doors as the pressure, shouting and jeering from the outside grew louder.

Some who waited asked the police for "law and order," while others retreated to a safe distance from the roughhousing.

The wardens took considerable verbal abuse for their handling of the sales.

"Did you ever see such a hell of a mess?" declared one hunter. "What are those wardens thinking about? If they can't run this show right, why don't they give up?"

Took Day Off

"I took a day off from my job and have been standing in that line since 6 this morning. I had a No. 31 in my hand and where do I wind up? About No. 50 and with my jacket half torn off my back," stormed one incensed Milwaukee man. "Believe me, somebody is going to hear about this."

"If the wardens and police had been outside the armory maintaining the lines we formed and letting us pass through, and kept those roaring, shouting intruders out of there, this wouldn't have happened," said another.

"Give us our money back, you dummies!" shouted a 265-pounder. "These guys are nothing but a bunch of revenuers; they aren't conservation people. They've turned us into animals; and I didn't come here to fight."

For the most part the women who stood watch held their places in line, but they shared in the fray with equal vigor.

Applauded, Booed

At 3 p.m., Warden Rex Oatman manned the loudspeaker of a county police car, cruised in front of the armory and announced. "If the brawling doesn't stop, I'll close the line." He was applauded and booed.

The 4:30 p.m. closing time was extended to 4:50 and all the 500 allotted permits were sold. Forty disappointed people stood in line and another estimated 100 to 150 left equally disappointed.

Four Radicals Sought

Holdup, Blast Linked

BOSTON (AP) — Police have linked the bombing and looting of a Newburyport National Guard armory last Sunday with one of four young persons sought in the holdup slaying of a Boston policeman.

Officers said supplies and ammunition stolen from the armory were found Thursday night in the Back Bay apartment of Katherine A. Power, 21, of Denver, Colo., sought with three others in the bank holdup-slaying.

Police Commissioner Edmund L. McNamara said the materials showed a "positive link" between Wednesday's slaying and "radical, revolutionary campus groups."

Officers with a search warrant seized rifles, ammunition, a military field telephone and other military gear in the apartment.

Other Evidence

They said they also found letters and other evidence in the two-room basement apartment of Miss Power, a Brandeis University senior, indicating it may also have been used by Susan Saxe, 20, of Albany, N.Y. a Brandeis graduate last June.

A similar raid at another Back Bay apartment yielded .45 caliber ammunition—the same type that killed the policeman—and letters linking it to a man already in custody.

All were charged with murder in the $26,000 holdup of the Brighton district branch of State Street Bank and Trust Co. in which a policeman was shot and wounded fatally.

The Newburyport armory, headquarters for Co. A, 101st Engineers, was looted and set afire last Sunday.

Suspects Named

Already under arrest in the bank robbery case was Robert Valeri, 21, of Somerset, Mass., a student at Northeastern University in Boston and an ex-convict.

The warrants, charging murder and armed robbery, named Miss Power, Miss Saxe, and two ex-convicts, Stanley R. Bond, 25, now enrolled at Brandeis, and William M. Gilday, 41, a student at Northeastern.

Police said they believed the girls and Bond flew to Los Angeles Thursday morning.

The $26,000 holdup occurred at the Brighton district branch of the State Street Bank and Trust Co. Wednesday morning.

In Albany, Eliot Saxe, Susan's father, said he believed his daughter was mistakenly identified. He said she lost her driver's license two months ago and someone must have found it.

Saxe said his daughter went to Oregon Sept. 1 and planned to work there a year.

"Out of Contact

In Denver, Mrs. Winfield S. Power, Kathy's mother, said the girl had been "out of contact with the family for a long time.' She declined further comment.

Sources on the Brandeis campus said Miss Power was active in the women's liberation movement and last month was one of five Brandeis students who sought in federal court to block the closing of the National Student Strike Information Center on the campus. Their effort failed.

The slain policeman was Patrolman Walter A. Schroeder, 42, father of nine, who held the department's highest honor, the Walter Scott Medal of Valor. He won it for capturing three men who robbed the same bank in 1968. His oldest child is 16.

A few hours after Schroeder died at St. Elizabeth's Hospital Thursday, detectives obtained warrants charging the two girls and two men with murder and armed robbery. They did not disclose the source of their information.

Security Tightened For Agnew Visit

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, one of the top moneymakers for the Republicans on the year's campaign circuit, was the chief attraction today at a $150-a-plate dinner at the Milwaukee Arena.

Police said some of the tightest security precautions in the city's history were being taken to assure that Agnew's televised speech wouldn't be interrupted by demonstrators.

Prior to the dinner, Agnew planned a private meeting with party backers who have contributed $400 or more to the campaign coffers. At least 2,000 diners were expected at the Arena, local Republicans said.

Requests for demonstration peace during Agnew's evening visit in Wisconsin have been made by two of the state's top Democrats, Sen. William Proxmire and gubernatorial candidate Patrick J. Lucey.

Jack Olson, the Republican nominee for governor, and John Erickson, GOP nominee for senator were to accompany Agnew on his flight from Washington to Milwaukee.

Olson's staff said the lieutenant governor would be in Washington today, joining in White House talks about revenue-sharing bills in Congress.

Revenue Plans

He has said some of the revenue plans could mean $120 million for Wisconsin by 1975.

"Some people are just too pessimistic about chances for passage," Olson said in a statement.

Lucey, in a campaign speech in Racine, continued his complaints against what he calls Wisconsin's sluggishness in helping cities with the increased costs of law enforcement.

"Law enforcement," Lucey said, "cannot be strengthened by vague political promises of 'law and order.' What are needed are hard-headed programs to improve the capability of police forces."

"Wisconsin is last in the nation in the percentage of the state budget devoted to direct police programs," he said.

Is It Orange Juice or Orange Drink?

BY LILLIAN MACKESY
Post-Crescent Food Editor

SAN FRANCISCO — There's confusion in the kitchen when it comes to orange juice and orange drinks. Tad Jeffery of the Florida Citrus Industry told newspaper food editors Wednesday.

The Florida Canners Association is helping the citrus industry do something about it, according to Jeffery. Both groups are urging the food and drug administration to adopt a few labeling standards so the shopper can tell whether it's real, part, or fake orange juice she's buying.

With the ever increasing amount of drinks, ades and synthetics on the market, says Jeffery, the shopper doesn't know what she's buying nor whether she's getting her money's worth.

Jeffery cited examples of consumer confusion, taken from a recent research survey made by the Market Research Corporation of America. The sampling included 2,000 housewives, who came up with these figures:

Twenty-two per cent thought a product labeled "Frozen concentrate for orange drink" was 100 per cent pure orange juice. The product contained only 10 per cent orange juice.

Twenty per cent thought a product labeled "frozen concentrate for orange flavored breakfast drink" was 100 per cent orange juice. It wasn't. This drink contained no orange juice at all.

Another misconception, the speaker said, is that full-strength orange juice and orange juice products are substantially diluted when they really are 100 per cent orange juice.

"This kind of confusion," concluded Jeffery, "adds up to the fact that consumers are not at all aware of what they really are getting (or not getting) for their money when they buy a product. Often, they even pay the same or sometimes more for the diluted orange-flavored beverage than for the bona-fide 100 per cent orange juice product."

He also noted that both frozen concentrated and chilled juice consumption has climbed over the past year, yet these products still carry the same price tag as 10 years ago.

"This is something that's true of very few items," he noted.

Language Arts Seminar Scheduled to Assist in Elementary Teaching

A seminar for elementary school teachers who teach language arts will be sponsored by the University Extension English Department in cooperation with Winnebago County beginning Oct. 14.

The purpose of the eight monthly sessions is to assist in continuing education of teachers by providing informative, stimulating, and helpful programs focused on current trends in elementary language arts, according to Mrs. Shirley Watson, Extension Home Economist for Winnebago County.

The seminar is equivalent to two in-service credits granted by local school boards, she said. The fee for the series is $16. Participants need not be full-time teachers and may include individuals who would like to up-date their knowledge for possible future employment, Mrs. Watson said.

Wash House Plants

Add house plants to the list of things which should be washed with soap and water. According to one entomologist, washing with soapy water and a soft brush or cloth may be all that's needed to remove aphids, mealybugs and scale insects from broad-leaved plants.

There'll be Women in the Woods

Women were right in the thick of things in the Fox Valley as they stood with men, in long, apprehensive lines waiting for deer party permits. The apprehensiveness was caused by the fact that party permits were cut about one-third this year.

In Waupaca, some women were pushed out of the line, others fought their way in, and many gave up as an at first orderly crowd became a shoving mob when conservation wardens announced that a numbered list made up by the would-be hunters, some of whom had been there all night, would not be honored.

Attending to milder business were the members of the auxiliary of the state Painting and Decorating Contractors Association, who are preparing to entertain more than 100 women during the state convention. It will be held at the Conway Motor Inn the weekend of Oct. 30.

In California women were busy with the matter of fashion and minis seemed to be losing the battle to pantsuits and pants and dresses. After five showed midis and evening wear, if not pants, trailing to the ankles and the floor. Almost all swimwear was shown with ponchos, or long coats or jackets.

Women gardeners from southeastern Wisconsin took the prizes in Wausau this week at the state Garden Club Federation's 43rd annual convention. Racine Juniorettes was named the top junior garden club. Elm Grove received the youth program of merit award and a Milwaukee couple was given the annual Lydia Shafer award.

On the political scene, Rose Kennedy again took the campaign trail for Ted. Her appearance in Boston marked the first of 12 planned receptions in support of the reelection of her surviving son to the U. S. Senate. "We Kennedys know we should never quit," Mrs. Kennedy told a mostly Irish, mostly female audience, and she added, "We won't quit now."

In New York, actress Jane Fonda went to Night Court and bailed out Black Panther Zayd Malik Shakur who was charged with criminal possession of three shotguns, a revolver and ammunition. Miss Fonda put up $2,500 because "he's innocent isn't he?"

Women Were on the edge of the crowd that rushed the Waupaca Armory doors when the deer party-permit doors opened at 1 p.m. Three women, up near the doors, said they were almost crushed, but they "got their permits." A few were turned away when the doors closed at 5:40 p.m. as the conservation wardens announced a sell-out.

Don't Abuse Your Kitchen

Regular Care Means Longer Wear

There's just one ironic aspect of modern kitchen equipment it's so easy to keep clean that we often abuse it by taking it for granted.

Too often spills and splashes aren't cleaned off right away or they are tackled with damaging abrasives. The stains and scratches that result can be avoided if you know just a little bit more about those wonderfully easy-to-keep clean surfaces.

For example, porcelain enamel — actually a highly durable glass fused on metal — used for such varied equipment as range tops and sides, refrigerator linings, laundry equipment surfaces and sinks. Its surface is smooth yet porous and acid-resistant but not acid-proof.

This means that it's vital to wipe up any acidy spills such as vinegar, milk or fruit juict immediately. Such stains may cause permanent dull spots. Then, when the surface is cool, wash with sudsy water using a cloth or sponge, followed by a rinse.

If eternal vigilance fails, never turn to an abrasive, because this can damage the glazed finish. Instead, use a plastic or other non-abrasive scrubber. Warm water and chlorine or perborate bleach diluted according to package instructions may help to remove stubborn stains. In additional to such "first aid" measures, porcelain enamel surfaces require regular washing with plenty of warm soap or detergent suds and rinses to keep them hygienically clean.

Another popular surfacing material is colorful laminated plastic, which often features such intriguing flora and fauna as eaves and buterflies beneath the surface. These plastics make charming room dividers, counters and table tops, and wall paneling. They are durable, resistant to stains, and also resistant to heat, but only up to a point.

Play safe by placing a pad or hot plate between them to bleaching products. Instead, treat them to daily wipings with a well lathered sponge or cloth to keep them spotless at all times.

Remember that a clean kitchen is as important to your family's health as it is to your prestige as a tidy homemaker.

Gain in Weight May Result From Metabolic Change

A popular opinion is that if you stop smoking, you're likely to gain weight. The idea is that you will substitute eating for the oral satisfaction of smoking.

According to a Temple University School of Medicine study, this is not necessarily so. Smokers who quit smoking usually gain weight because their rate of metabolism changes.

The study involved seven volunteers who quit smoking for one month. Previously they had smoked from eight to 22 years, and averaged 28 cigarettes a day. All had slower rates of metabolism after they gave up cigarettes. The average weight gain was 6.5 pounds each. Only one volunteer reported eating more. He gained the most weight.

Judge's Ruling Questions All Sheriff Dept. Arrests

Van Susteren Overturns Jury's Verdict on 5 Misdemeanors; District Attorney Plans Appeal

BY PETER BACH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

An Outagamie County judge has handed down a ruling that could question the validity of every arrest ever made by members of the county Sheriff Department.

County Judge Urban P. Van Susteren, after reviewing touchy legalities in the cases of three Seymour men found guilty of five misdemeanor charges a week ago, set aside the jury's findings and Thursday dismissed counts against Orville Gagnow, 43, his son, Larry, 23, and the owner of the Pine Castle Ballroom in rural Seymour, Francis Coonen.

Dist. Atty. James R. Long said he would immediately appeal the decision to the Circuit Court, on the ground that it is contrary to a recent State Supreme Court ruling involving a Brown County case.

The Supreme Court ruled in June that a trial judge need not be convinced that a jury was correct or agree with their findings for their verdicts to stand.

Status at Issue

At issue was the status of the arresting officer, William Knutson, who, while acting in the capacity of a county sheriff's deputy the night of July 25 at the Pine Castle, charged the three after a fracas started during a wedding reception for Larry.

The defense attorney argued that according to a rarely consulted Wisconsin statute, Knutson, in order to be acting as a duly authorized police officer, would have had to file his deputy's oath with the county clerk's office.

Testimony during trial by County Clerk Arthur Hoolihan, who checked records, revealed that Knutson did not do this. Instead, it was learned that his oath is on record in the clerk of courts office.

Van Susteren, upon establishing that the statute applies in this case, complied with defense motions, which argued that the charges "have to fall" if Knutson was not qualified as a police officer. In line with that, he dropped a charge of obstructing an officer against Orville and a charge of resisting arrest against Larry.

A disorderly conduct count against Larry would have remained, the judge said, had it been proved that his actions on the 25th led the crowd to become boisterous or otherwise disorderly, in spite of the presence of police.

Long, terming the questionable nature of the statute a quandary, said "I don't believe the statute requires" filing an oath of deputy with the County Clerk.

Knutson, who was in uniform that night, "gave the appearance of a police officer and all the guests had no doubt that he was," Long charged. He further held that all the deputies presently serving the sheriff's department also have failed to file their oaths with the county clerk's office. The violation carries a maximum fine of $100.

Long implied that the little-challenged section was seemingly not to be taken literally, or binding, but subject to interpretation.

"As far as I'm concerned,"

Agencies Outline Planning For Martin Subcommittee

Executive directors of the two Fox Cities-based regional planning agencies outlined their accomplishments this morning and told the State Rep. David Martin ad hoc subcommittee for regional planning that they have had implementations of plans.

Eugene Franchett, of the Fox Valley Council of Governments (COG), the metropolitan agency, and Charles Hervey, of the Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission, the multi-county agency, reviewed their agencies, their programs and goals, as the subcommittee opened hearings on the growing controversy of the agencies' overlapping jurisdictions.

Opening the hearing, Martin said "The intent here, of course, is to strengthen municipal government, not to weaken it, with an effort to provide an effective viable regional planning organization in the Outagamie-Winnebago area.

More Sessions

"If we continue to allow groups to lapse into a continued state of bickering and controversy over jurisdiction, our efforts will be ineffective and the citizens of this area will not be getting the results expected," he said.

He promised more and possible more formal sessions later but said this session was for delineating each agency's responsibilities and discussing a possible merger, and discussing state and federal requirements for regional planning efforts.

Representatives of the State Department of Local Affairs and Development and of Administration sought to explain current federal and state positions and guidelines for regional planning.

"Things on the federal level) are in a state of flux," said Craig Adams, of the administration department's planning bureau. He agreed with Martin this is normal but it's worse now.

He added, however, that most recent U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) guidelines for regional planning are less demanding and more suggestive.

He agreed with Al Karetske, of the local affairs department's planning section, that more decision making responsibility of planning jurisdictions and organizations was being given to the state.

Overlapping Spending

Martin said his concern was that the region not spend monies with both planning agencies for the identical plan. He said he was told the state is attempting to prevent this.

Most of the session was explanations and explanatory answers to questions, which chiefly came from Martin. However, local officials took the opportunity to criticize what they felt was a poor record of implementation of plans.

Outagamie County Supv. Joseph DeBruin, Town of Buchanan, said he had a fear that more and more money was going to be spent on planning by the nation every year until there's none left for implementation.

Directing his remarks at both agencies, he said the area should cut back on the number of agencies and stop just talking for hours.

Gilbert Krueger, chairman of the Neenah-Menasha Sewerage Commission, joined the criticism, directing his remarks at Franchett and COG.

Community Needs

Franchett outlined what had been implemented, including the progress on the tri-county expressway acquisition of right-of-way, and suggested that he hoped individual areas could rise above the traditional, parochial views on the service programs, such as sewerage treatment, and go regional for economic and efficiency reasons.

Town of Grand Chute Chairman Ira Livingston questioned state officials and Franchett about whether the community's need, its willingness to pay and its ability to pay shouldn't determine whether a regional plan is prepared. He said this planning money possibly could be better spent on action programs.

Hervey, who followed Franchett's presentation, said the regional planning commission felt that unless plans are implemented they're useless. For this reason, he said, it has specifically hired a man to seek to acquire federal and state grants for its programs.

He also suggested that COG and Northeastern could work "hand in hand," and said that similar situations existed in Orlando, Fla., and Houston, Tex.

Valley Fluid Power Chapter Has Meeting

The Fox Valley Chapter, National Fluid Power Society, this week heard a talk on the purposes of the national organization by Russell Henke of the national headquarters.

Chapter officers are William Sulzmann, Fluid System Components, Inc., Green Bay, president; Ken West, Kundinger Fluid Power, Appleton, vice president; Len Place, Fox Valley Technical Institute, Oshkosh, secretary; and John Hansen, Paper Converting Machines Co., Green Bay, treasurer.

The next meeting of the group will be Oct. 20.

Supervisors May Get Parking Soon

Outagamie County supervisors may have their first off-street parking available in time for the Oct. 13 County Board meeting.

The board's Special Building Committee this morning instructed Sauter-Seaborne Architects to immediately seek city approval for design plans for space on the Southwest corner of Sixth and Walnut streets.

At the same time, the committee approved purchase of the property at 515 S. Walnut St. which, when acquired, will give the county all of the property fronting on Walnut between Fifth and Sixth streets.

Proposals are to retain the property at the corner of Fifth and Walnut for a juvenile receiving home and the house at 515 S. Walnut St. for either a halfway house or community guidance center.

The remaining property on Walnut, plus a piece of property on Fifth, adjacent to the planned juvenile receiving home, would be developed for parking.

Of the $175,000 authorized by the board for acquisition of off-street parking property, $157,000 has been spent, according to Supv. Jerome Hiler, Appleton, Special Building Committee chairman.

Eight pieces of property were purchased around the courthouse for that amount. Also included in the total is real estate broker fees.

Eugene Speener, county hospital administrator, told the committee that he was interested in one of the houses for the halfway house.

He was to check the Walnut Street property and compare to the house at 324 W. Sixth St., which originally was planned for the juvenile receiving home, and then present the proposal to the hospital trustees Monday night.

Speener said he had six patients now at the hospital who would qaulify for halfway house experience. He said property in the courthouse neighborhood would be ideal because it is near transportation and the downtown area.

Welfare Minutes

Dispute Up to Parnell

Disputed minutes of the Outagamie County Board of Social Services will go to Circuit Court Judge Andrew W. Parnell for a decision on which portion of them can be made public.

Gordon Myse, an attorney representing Post Corporation which last month brought a lawsuit in an attempt to obtain the minutes, and A. W. Ponath, recently hired as special legal counsel for the county, were unable to agree on which portions of the minutes are public record.

Myse said he studied the records and met with Ponath Tuesday. He said they disagreed on several aspects concerning what could legally be made public in the minutes kept by the welfare board.

Parnell, after a Sept. 9 order to show cause hearing, ruled for Post Corporation and ordered that all original minutes of the social services board for 1969 and 1970 meetings be turned over to the clerk of courts office.

He also instructed Myse and Ponath to examine the minutes and attempt to agree on what portions of them could legally be released. State law prohibits release of some information concerning welfare cases and clients.

Parnell stipulated that if the attorneys couldn't agree, the minutes should be turned over to him for a decision on which parts of them could be released. No one else was to have access to the sealed minutes until agreement is reached, Parnell ordered.

Parnell reportedly will be out of town until Monday. Post Corporation started legal action against three county officials after a reporter for The Post-Crescent had failed in several attempts to examine the minutes of past public meetings held by the welfare board.

A spokesman in the Outagamie County Clerk's office said today that the welfare board is now filing its minutes in that office, as is required by state law. The board had not done this in past years.

Receiving Home

Woehler Calls for Policy Challenge

Outagamie County Administrator Alvin Woehler said he wants the county to challenge the state's aid policies for operation of a county juvenile receiving home.

Woehler made the challenge Thursday night during debate in the County Board's Public Properties and Parks Committee over the latest plans for a receiving home.

Vern Leach, County Social Services supervisor, reminded the committee that if the county owned and operated the home itself it would not be eligible for state aids on some operational costs. To receive the aids, a lease-back-type arrangement was necessary with the foster parents involved, Leach said.

Woehler disputed this, saying, "I want to take this aid thing to completion. If they won't give us aid we'll just have to inform the people."

The receiving home issue was back before the committee as a result of the board's Special Building Committee purchasing a different house for use as the receiving home and recommending disposal of the house bought six months ago.

A home on the northwest corner of Walnut and Fifth streets was purchased for $30,000.

Committee Chairman Nick Karras said there was no comparison between this home and the one previously purchased. The first house, at 324 W. Sixth St., was purchased for $17,500 and another $10,000 authorized for remodeling. No remodeling work has been done, however. The Fifth Street house has about 20 per cent more space.

Woehler said the county hospital is interested in using the house on Sixth Street as a halfway house and indicated there would not be the need for as extensive of remodeling for that purpose.

Leach disagreed with the contention the house on Fifth and Walnut streets could be used as is but said the amount of remodeling needed was relatively minor.

"Do you want a custom-made house?" Woehler asked. "I'm starting to wonder if that wouldn't be cheaper," Leach said.

The juvenile receiving home is used as emergency housing for abandoned or neglected children until a court decides where the children should be placed.

The county has been without a receiving home for more than a year.

New Exhibits On Display at Rail Museum

GREEN BAY — Three outstanding new exhibits will be on display at the National Railroad Museum, 2285 South Broadway, this weekend, as the museum concludes its 1970 summer season.

They are the Pullman car, "Poplar River," which was used for many years between Chicago and Seattle on the famous transcontinental train, "The Empire Builder;" the private car, Gen. Carl R. Gray, formerly Monon No. 99; and the "Isle of Thanet," one of the Churchill Pullmans brought to the museum by Alan Pegler and donated to the museum by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Koziol, of Antioch, Ill.

The "Poplar River" is one of the last Pullman cars to be built in the 1940s. Donated to the museum by the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, shortly before its merger with the Great Northern, the car has bedrooms and roomettes.

Boy Scouts from Troop 39, De Pere, will act as guides and attendants on the Churchill car; two Eisenhower staff cars, and the General Grav. The Scouts are serving on board the cars as a public service project.

At a meeting held this week at the museum, the board of directors voted purchase and installation of a roof for the new pavilion. Installation will begin early in October.

Code for Housing Sought by Mayor

MENASHA — After a trip to Milwaukee Thursday, Mayor James Adams is convinced a minimum standards housing code would not require hundreds of Menasha homeowners to make structural improvements to existing homes.

But he also was told, by the state Federal Housing Administration (FHA) administrator, that there is a discrepancy between FHA standards for low- and moderate-income housing and Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) requirements for a minimum standards housing code.

Adams, who went to Milwaukee with City Planner Robert Osheim to meet with FHA Administrator Lawrence Katz and also attend a public hearing on the state's new relocation law, said he wants Osheim to meet with City Atty. Richard Steffens and work out differences over a proposed housing code for Menasha.

The differences between Osheim and Steffens are becoming legend. In this case, Steffens has legally interpreted a minimum housing model code prepared by the Fox Valley Council of Governments (COG) harshly, while Osheim has returned with a report saying a code would not create the problems steffens says it would.

In at least one case, Adams agrees with Osheim.

"There's nothing dishonest (in the HUD - FAH discrepancies, and the effect they would have on local enforcement of a code), as implied by the city attorney," the mayor said today.

'Working On It'

Adams said he learned Thursday:

—That there are discrepancies between FHA and HUD standards, but that "they are working on it," according to Katz.

—If an ordinance were passed in Menasha, it would affect all future construction, which would have to conform to code standards.

Existing structures would not have to conform to structural requirements, unless nonconformance created a health or safety hazard.

Occupancy Standards

Occupancy standards, which set a maximum limit of persons who can live in a house of so many square feet, would be enforced against both existing and new housing.

—Action against existing housing could also be taken on complaint from neighbors and others.

The city's plumbing inspector or health officer, who would probably be responsible jointly for enforcement, would not be making random inspections of housing on the assumption that there are instances of nonconformance, Adams said. They would conduct inspections if there were complaints.

—Mobile homes could be made allowable under an ordinance through a special provision written into it, Katz told Adams.

Steffens had questioned whether mobile homes would be allowed under a code.

The mayor was "pleased" with Katz' statement that a code would not be retroactively enforced against existing housing, although "I think most of the structures in this community would conform anyway."

He said a code was needed in Menasha "to prevent rundown areas from developing" that would not be eliminated without resorting to condemnation proceedings, which require that a structure be 50 per cent beyond repair before orders can be issued.

He's also interested in ameliorating the differences between Osheim and Steffens.

"I'm interested in procedures developed between these two individuals (Steffens and Osheim) that would produce, whether or not we get federal money, a code that would prevent deteriorated housing in the city in the future," Adams said.

Along with the mayor's campaign against deteriorated housing, the city is also looking at the potential for federal urban renewal and other aid programs that would require the city have a housing code in order to be eligible for money.

State to Gauge Cost of Overpass

NEENAH — Within "a week or so" state highway engineers expect to have completed preliminary estimates on a railroad overpass at Breezewood Lane so city and town officials can get together to decide on the politics of financing and construction.

In a joint meeting three weeks ago, officials asked the state to draft the preliminary designs so they would have a firm cost estimate to make a decision.

Clem Mertens, district 3 chief design engineer, said today that his office's part of the project was nearing completion and the cost "looks like it will be in the $600,000 to $700,000 range."

Although politicans have been holding off on discussing alternatives for financing the project, since both municipalities would benefit, Wayne Bryan, Neenah public works director, has included the overpass in the 1972 and 1973 capital improvements program.

According to Bryan's proposal $60,000 in engineering fees is being scheduled for 1972, with the $600 construction cost coming in 1973.

He pointed out that he had assumed "a revenue income from other sources," but did not specify a financial arrangement with the town.

Public Hearing

The new proposal came following a State Highway Commission public hearing here after the city and town had objected to the proposed Bergstrom Interchange because of inadequate access east of the twin set of railroad tracks at Breezewood Lane.

State engineers came back with an alternative to shoot Breezewood Lane east to tie in with Bell Street instead of using Harrison Street as the major feeder to the interchange.

Mertens explained that his office has not submitted answers to the commission to questions raised at the public hearing — and will not until the city and town decide what they want to do.

Mutual Solution

"We will work with the city and town to find a mutual agreeable solution to cross the railroad tracks, and financing the construction, before we submit our report to the commission," he added.

Mertens said his office is working on a design to have the overpass tie into the interchange with it swinging south of the Kampo Warehouse facility there.

"It looks like it will take about 1,200 feet for the road to get down to grade," he said.

The city has been somewhat excited about the proposal because it would give it access to eastern section of the city without having to fight the train delays.

If the proposal goes through, motorists could get all the way through Neenah without crossing a single railroad track.

State officials namely Mertens and his boss, Harold Fiedler, have mentioned the possibility of bidding and constructing the railroad overpass at the same time as the interchange goes in, which could mean a substantially dollar savings compared to the city and town carrying out the project on their own.

However, town officials have been reluctant to commit any funds to the project, pointing out that the city could handle a large investment like that, but it would be too great an impact on the town's lower assessed valuation.

It is this political decision, what the cost sharing ratio will be, that the officials have to decide. If an equitable arrangement can be worked out, then, Mertens said, he will forward his report to the commission.

He was quick to point out, however, that the project was also subject to review and action by the Federal Bureau of Roads. "And this probably won't come before Jan. 1."

Waushara May Keep Guidance Unit

WAUTOMA — Guidance Clinic wobbles in Waushara County are not exactly straightened out, but developments look "very favorable" to Dr. Richard Domrath, its part-time psychologist.

The clinic is administered by the Winnebago Guidance Center, and has been under enough attack by some Waushara supervisors to cause the resignation of James Howman, the psychiatric social worker and only full-time employe. The whole program was in danger of going down the drain.

Domrath said today that the clinic committee accepted Howman's resignation, voted to recommend a full budget to the county board and will resurrect a motion to form a citizens' advisory committee. The motion was tabled at the last county board meeting.

They will advertise and attend conventions to recruit another social worker, Domrath said. This time around, they will work with the citizens committee to define the new man's duties and will ease his entry into the community. One of the requirements will be that the social worker live in the county. Howman lived in Berlin, just south of the county line.

"I feel pretty positive about it," Domrath said of the operation's future. "The citizens' advisory committee will provide much more communication. The county board members are not centrally interested in it. They are not knowledgeable about it and feel uncomfortable with it."

3 Fox Cities Youths Face Court in Theft

Appleton, Menasha Teens Charged With Concealing Property

MENASHA — Two Appleton youths and a Menasha youth were to be arraigned in Winnebago County Court Branch 3 this afternoon on charges of concealing stolen property worth $133.05.

The three are:

—Dale A. Lewin, 18, 316½ W. Commercial St., Appleton.

—John C. Will, 18, 317 Chute St., Menasha.

—John E. Hass, 19, 806 N. Meade St., Appleton.

Another 19-year-old Menasha youth, William D. Tobin, 456 Water St., Menasha, was set to be arraigned in the same court today in connection with the same incident.

The charge against Tobin, however, was expected to be drunk and disorderly conduct and obstructing an officer.

The three are being charged with concealing $133 worth of liquor stolen from the Menasha Hotel on Tuesday.

The stolen property included a full case plus seven bottles of brandy and nine quarts of vodka.

The three were apprehended at about 1 a.m. behind the Eagles Club along Main Street, Menasha, after a man who came out of the back door felt they were acting suspicious and called police.

When police arrived, they picked the three up and found the stolen goods nearby.

Police said Tobin then arrived on the scene and was also apprehended after tussling with an officer.

Neenah to Sale-a-brate Facelifting

NEENAH — Downtown merchants are gathering forces to launch what they think will be "the most successful sales event" in the downtown, with a "New Look" sale-a-bration on Oct. 15 and 16.

The event is slated to mark the first anniversary of the facelifting effort, which included store fronts, new colorful awnings and flat signs.

What Neenah has done to dress up its downtown is now being used as a format for other similar "Main Street" areas throughout the country.

The De Moines Register, for instance, urged its merchants in an editorial to follow Neenah's example to complete a half million dollar facelifting in that city.

Carl Moe, the architect of Neenah's effort, has appeared at several outside sessions outlining what Neenah merchants did for the $50,000 total estimated cost.

The local merchants are shooting for 100 per cent participation in the sales events and have urged their merchants to join the event."

Heading up the "sale-a-bration" committee are Frank Hardt, chairman, and Florence Forbes, Rick Hardt and Mary Gerou.

Man Is Found Competent for Felony Trial

A Town of Grand Chute man, charged with a felony after reportedly firing a shot Aug. 28 that nearly struck an Outagamie County sheriff's investigator, has been found competent, to stand trial, by a psychiatric team at Central State Hospital.

Alvin Sam Carlson, 47, formerly of 2002 N. Tillman St., requested a preliminary hearing Thursday on a charge of endangering safety by conduct regardless of life, before County Judge Nick F. Schaefer.

Schaefer, who heard Carlson's attorney request the hearing in Branch 2, scheduled the hearing for next Friday in the court of Judge Gustave J. Keller. Carlson was returned to the county jail under $1,000 bond.

Authorities said the shot was fired when two investigators went to the scene of Carlson's small trailer house to stand guard while heavy equipment was readied to destroy the trailer. The dwelling had earlier been condemned by Town of Grand Chute authorities who maintained it constituted a health hazard.

Major Changes in Diet

Protein Foods of Future Are Soybeans, Fish, Petroleum

BY LILLIAN MACKESY
Post-Crescent Food Editor

SAN FRANCISCO — Americans in about 10 years may be getting their protein from the soybeans, fish and even from petroleum to bring major changes in the American diet.

In some cases it will mean a whole new form of traditional foods, said Dr. Herbert E. Robinson, research vice president of Swift & Co. A member of the White House Conference on Nutrition, Robinson spoke at the 1970 Newspaper Food Editors Conference Wednesday.

The two major stumbling blocks to the development of what he called "super-nutritious" foods are consumer attitudes and governmental restrictions. The food industry and a major petroleum company already are studying a new protein concentrate from a substance called ethanol, he said, with pilot plants being considered. The production of protein by growing yeast on hydrocarbons already is becoming big scale in the field of animal food supplements. Gulf Oil has a processing plant in California, following those in Europe, Japan and Russia.

"However, if the public is to take advantage of these nutritionally superior foods," Robinson said, "There will have to be a major change in attitude toward imitations."

The scientist explained that the high degree of nutrition in many forms of the processed food he called super nutritious would come from adding vitamins, proteins and minerals not found in the basic ingredients. These foods would include breakfast cereals, frozen and other fresh main dishes, he said.

Under present regulations, if the minerals, vitamin or protein content of so-called standard foods is altered, these products must be labeled "imitation." This has been a big deterrent to the development of new food forms, Robinson said.

"The widespread belief is that an imitation food is an inferior one," he said. "This is nonsense because an imitation food, so labeled even now can mean 'superior' in its quality of nutrition. It would be desirable if these foods could carry a name to accurately identify them for consumers — as in the case of margarine — without the connotation of imitation."

Although margarine is not considered an imitation dairy product today, it was the first with its origin in the early 1900s. Robinson said.

Meat will remain the major source of protein in our diet, the scientists said, but protein from soybeans and other sources including fish meal and petroleum will provide a great opportunity to improve the nutritional quality of snack foods and soft drinks.

"Perhaps the most dramatic success story in United States agriculture is the growth of soybeans from obscurity to the largest protein and oil crop source in the country in just a few years," he said.

"Your per capita share of one-quarter pound of soy protein a year may not sound like much now," he told the food editors, "but five years ago you probably ate none and five years from now your intake will be more than 20 times what it is today.

"There also is no question that fish protein concentrates will become an important source of protein for humans. The production of acceptable and nutritious protein products from fish has become a reality.

A large-scale pilot plant is scheduled for completion in Washington this year, and a $2 million contract has been awarded to Ocean Harvesters in Los Angeles by the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries. The plant will convert 50 tons of raw fish into 8 tons of fish protein concentrate."

It will take a massive education effort by government and industry if these new forms for traditional foods are to be accepted, Robinson said, since "Mr. and Mrs. Consumer do not like to consume totally unfamiliar foods no matter what claims are made for them nutritionally."

A presentence investigation was ordered Thursday for Edwin J. Konopacki, 51, 1130 W. Eighth St., after he was found guilty on a charge of sex perversion. Konopacki pleaded guilty before Outagamie County Judge Nick F. Schaefer, who set sentencing for Oct. 13.

Konopacki is being held in the county jail without bond awaiting disposition on the felony count.

2 Remaining Road Projects In Outagamie

Hearings Wednesday On Proposed Work On County F and I

Only two minor county highway projects remain for the current construction year, according to Outagamie County Highway Commissioner Clarence Brownson.

Brownson described the year as "average" in terms of work done and said the weather would be the determining factor on whether the two remaining jobs would be completed.

A hearing is scheduled Wednesday on the work proposed for County Trunks F and I in the northwestern corner of the county. Both projects are under the Federal Aid Secondary roads program.

The only other work planned but not completed was Bluemound Road between U.S. 10 and County Trunk OO and E. College Avenue between State 55 and County Trunk Q.

Road Grade Change

Brownson said Bluemound Road has been held up because officials of the planned central vocation school have indicated that they want a grade change in the road. East College Avenue has been held up pending results of a request of the Chicago and North Western Railway to abandon a section of track.

If the track is abandoned, Brownson said, it will mean the elimination of a costly bridge over the railraod right-of-way.

Work during the summer included:

— County Trunk U, from U.S. 41 to State 96 (two miles), grading and base work completed, asphalt paving started.

County Trunk HH

— County Trunk HH, from County Trunk K to County Trunk CE (.6 mile) grading and base work done, asphalt paving to be done this fall.

— County Trunk A, from County Trunk O to County Trunk S (2.5 miles), grading, base work and surface work done.

— County Trunk B, State 47 to County Trunk PP (1.75 miles), grading done last year, paving now completed.

— County Trunk CE, from Appleton city limits to State 55, completed paving project started last year.

County Trunk BB

— County Trunk BB, from U.S. 45 to Winnebago County line (3.5 miles), completed grading, starting base work, paving to be done next year.

Brownson said there was about a two-week delay in paving work because of an asphalt shortage but supplies are again adequate.

Work was slow getting started because of the cool, wet spring, Brownson said, but July and August were almost perfect months.

Jury's Verdict Overturned

Sheriff Calvin L. Spice said this morning, "my men are authorized police officers in accordance with the law." He referred to 59.21 (6) of the Wisconsin statutes, which he said he has adhered to during his tenure as the county's chief law enforcement officer.

The statute requires that deputies and county police file their oaths and appointment notices with the clerk of court's office, which they have done.

Spice said Long has advised him not to change anything at this point.

"I have checked with several other sheriff departments throughout the state and they don't file their oaths in the County Clerk's office either," Spice noted.

Long said this morning that if Van Susteren's ruling were upheld it is "conceivable that all the county deputies and police officers would lose their authority, but that remains to be decided. I am confident that the higher court will overturn each of Van Susteren's decisions."

Two counts charging that Francis Coonen sold beer to two minor boys were also dismissed Thursday.

"I wouldn't send a dog to the dog pound on such flimsy evidence," Van Susteren proclaimed, referring to the counts. "It would have taken me two minutes to find him innocent of that."

Two 17-year-old Green Bay youths testified during trial that they each bought a bottle of beer in the teen section of the Pine Castle that night from a man later identified as one of Coonen's bartenders. The bartender denied it on the stand.

In the parking lot later, the pair was questioned by Knutson, in the presence of an 18-year-old youth.

"I find it hard to believe that Coonen and his bartenders would willingly serve beer to minors," Van Susteren said, citing the clean record of each. He implied that the boy, 18, could have purchased the beer for his younger companions during a rush at the bar, and that would give the 17-year-olds an "excuse for lying" to protect him.

The fracas was reportedly sparked off in connection with KGnutson's questioning of the youths, acquaintances of Larry Gognow, shortly after Gagnow stepped into the discussion to intercede for them, as host of his wedding party.

Man Is Hospitalized For Industrial Injury

A 31-year-old machine operator is in satisfactory condition today at Appleton Memorial Hospital after injuries suffered Thursday in an industrial accident at Appleton Coated Paper Co.

Ronald L. Clark, 1204 E. Jardin St., was taken to the hospital with cuts on both arms and head, by the fire department rescue squad, just after 4:30 p.m.

According to a co-worker, Clark was caught in a rewinding machine.

Knowles Sees Tax Increase

Prediction in Contrast to Olson Campaign Promise

MADISON (AP) — Gov. Warren P. Knowles is quoted as saying state tax increases seem almost inevitable next year, sharply in contrast to a campaign approach being taken by the Republican candidate for governor, Jack Olson.

The Milwaukee Sentinel, in today's editions, said Knowles told an interviewer that he would propose a balanced tax and spending budget were he seeking another term.

But there seems "no way" that the 1971 legislature can avoid raising taxes to meet what some sources have predicted could be a $2 billion biennial budget, the Republican governor was quoted as saying.

Knowles is not seeking re-election. Republicans have chosen Lt. Gov. Olson as his replacement, facing Democrat Patrick J. Lucey in the Nov. 3 election.

Olson has tread lightly on the 1971 tax outlook, while Lucey has said it is too early to predict that tax increases won't be needed.

Knowles said the state's next governor is going to have to worry about financing higher costs for schools, welfare and pollution abatement.

He said he would favor revision of the increased 4 per cent sales tax which the Republican-controlled legislature adopted two years ago, and would provide a refund to needy families.

Knowles proposed a $1.5 billion budget for 1969-71 with a 3 per cent sales tax and refunds. The legislature reduced the package to $1.56 billion, and increased the sales tax over protests from the Democratic minority.

"The one big plus" which Wisconsin taxpayers would get from the credit-refund proposal, Knowles said, would be refund-exempt "payment of sales taxes on all items by our out-of-state visitors."

Collecting sales taxes from tourists without their having the resident citizen's access to the refunds, Knowles added, would be one way of measuring "just how much our tourist business is really worth."

LeTendre Favors Funds For Transit

WAUSAU — Federal funds are needed to help local mass transit systems improve service, Seventh District congressional candidate Andre LeTendre said today.

The Republican candidate told a safety seminar here that he supports President Nixon's proposal to provide $10 billion over a 12-year period to subsidize local transit operations and finance research and development for better methods of mass transportation.

The aim of the program, LeTendre said, would be to break "the cycle of higher fares, fewer passengers and diminishing service."

LeTendre is challenging the incumbent Democrat, Rep. David Obey of Wausau.

Obey's volunteer campaign committee manager, William Bablitch, Stevens Point, today announced that Ray Thums, a Wausau attorney, and Don Nystrom, a Marshfield medical clinic executive, have agreed to serve as business and professional coordinators for the Citizen's Good Government Committee.

The committee provides advice and suggests appearances to be included on Obey's campaign itinerary.

DNR Advice to be Sought In Mosquito Hill Planning

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) will be asked to provide guidance for the planning of development of Mosquito Hill and the planned addition to Plamann Park.

The action by the Parks Committee came on the recommendation of County Administrator Alvin O. Woehler Thursday night after he less than cooly rejected a Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission proposal to use graduate students in the University of Wisconsin Landscape Architecture Department.

Charles Hervey, planning commission director, made the proposal for use of graduate students after the Parks Committee balked at the commission's estimated $20,000 planning and engineering costs for development of the two parks.

After the Parks Committee had received the estimates, it recommended that the county investigate hiring a full-time county planner rather than pay outside planners.

Talk to DNR

Woehler said that before the committee did anything it should talk to the DNR. He said that in previous conversations with the DNR, they had expressed a willingness to assist the county in determining the direction to take. Supv. Nick Karras, Appleton, committee chairman, agreed that this was the impression he also had received from the state agency.

Hervey contended that hiring a county planner would not solve park planning needs. "The average planner is not qualified to do park planning," Hervey said.

He added that to draw detailed engineering plans for a park such as Mosquito Hill would take one man about six months.

This, Hervey said, is response to a committee question, was beyond the scope of responsibility of the regional planning commission.

Defer Planning

He also suggested deferring planning on one park for a year to reduce planning costs. The costs would be further reduced, he contended, by using the University of Wisconsin students.

Woehler also asked for a meeting with Hervey Monday to "iron out" billing procedures used by the planning commission.

The county administrator said he had received a bill from Northeastern for its services on the ad hoc study committee on solid waste disposal and wanted to know why.

Hervey said no bill had been sent for service with that committee and than any bills dealing with solid waste disposal stemmed from a solid waste disposal study started a year ago by the commission.

Woehler said that there were other bills which were not identified as to what budget they were from and wanted to discuss them with Hervey.

Consumer Coordinator Quits Post

MADISON (AP) — The state Department of Justice's coordinator of consumer affairs, Mrs. Betty Cooper, has resigned from her job to devote more time to consumer education.

Because of recent legislation giving the department investigative and injunctive powers enabling the attorney general to move into the enforcement field of consumer protection, the job will not be refilled.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Arvid Sather said: "When Betty was hired, our consumer program was less law enforcement because we didn't have the tools."

Mrs. Cooper's job involved writing a column and coordination of governmental and private energies.

Mrs. Cooper said her resignation doesn't imply criticism of the department's consuner protection activities. She said she had an "excellent rapport" with her superiors.

"There is so much to be done that can't be done sitting at a desk," Mrs. Cooper said, adding she "wanted more opportunity to communicate with the consumer in education."

The resignation has been in effect for more than a month, but was not officially announced until Thursday.

Funds Asked For ETV in Green Bay

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The State Educational Communications Board today formally requested $700,000 in state and federal grants to construct an educational TV station in Green Bay. It would cover the Fox Valley as far south as Oshkosh.

The proposal calls for the installation of the facilities in a commercial station in Green Bay and construction of an antenna on an existing tower at Soray's Hill, DePere.

Either WBAY or WLUK will be selected depending on rental charges, if the project is approved.

State funding requested totals $315,000, from ETV funds held by the Wisconsin Building Commission. A $385,000 federal grant also was requested.

In a separate action the board proposed a $77,500 move of the state FM radio station in Chilton to the new ETV site.

The Building Commission will be asked for the funds at an Oct. 12 meeting.

Session to Aid Towns With Waste Problems

RHINELANDER — Proper septic tank location and selection and operation of landfills will be analyzed Oct. 5 and 6 at the Rhinelander fairgrounds.

The session is designed to help town, village and city officials that have solid waste disposal problems. Work of municipal engineers, sanitary landfill operators, zoning administrators and sanitarians will be discussed.

The meeting will be conducted by members of the University of Wisconsin, (UW) Department of Natural Resources, UW extension service, state division of Public Health and United States Soil Conservation Service.

Appleton Man to be in National Pistol Contest

State Patrol Sgt. Arthur School, Appleton, will participate in the ninth annual Police Pistol Championships at Jackson, Miss., from Sept. 29 to Oct. 1.

The matches, sponsored by the National Rifle Association, will draw nearly 300 of the country's top police handgun competitors. The program calls for two days of individual competition and one day of team events.

Hetu to Inspect Fish Firm Before Land Sale Allowed

The Appleton planning director has been instructed to make a detailed inspection of a local fish and seafood firm to guide city officials in deciding whether to sell land in the Northeast Industrial Park where the firm hopes to relocate.

Planner Jack Hetu said the aim of the inspection will be to determine whether operations of Anchor Fish & Seafood, Inc., are "compatible with a campus-type industrial park."

Hetu said that in 1962 he helped conduct a survey of Chicago fish markets and found they generated noise, odor, transportation and other problems that wouldn't fit into the type of atmosphere planned for the Northeast Park.

Officials don't know whether the local firm, now operating in a Town of Grand Chute plant and warehouse, is of the same type as those Hetu has observed.

The commerce and Industrial Development Committee this week recommended having Hetu conduct the inspection while also reaffirming previous committee action recommending granting the firm a 90-day option on 5 acres of land in the park.

Hetu's report would go to the Plans Commission, which must approve sale of public land.

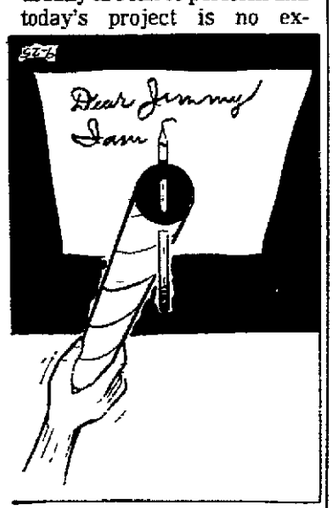
'Towel Core Writing' Causes Odd Penmanship

BY CAPPY DICK

Pencil-and-paper stunts usually are fun to perform and today's project is no exception. It's "towel core writing."



Funny Results

As the name suggests, the writing is done by means of a paper towel core. The adjoining illustration shows the equipment and how it is used.

Writing that results will be rather irregular as compared with your usual handwriting; in fact, you'll get a kick out of how funny-looking your writing will be.

Carefully make two small holes near the end of an empty towel core. Make them directly opposite each other so that a pencil can be poked through both of them. The pencil must fit snugly. This completes the preparation.

Place a piece of paper on your desk. Hold the towel core with one hand and proceed to write as in the picture above.

The first time you try this stunt the writing will probably be a lot stranger-looking than it will be after you have practiced the stunt many times. Even then, it won't be the same as your regular writing.

For additional fun, try drawing cartoons with the towel core pencil.

Consensus of Four-Day Span Of ABC Shows: Just Fair

BY JINGO

This year's new TV show debuts have been spread out rather thinly. For example, today's four reviews (all on ABC) cover a four-day span, Sunday through Wednesday. On the other hand, Jingo had four programs last night alone. Jingo will have reviews of those soon.

"The Young Rebels" (6-7 p.m., Sundays, Channels 11-6-9) — If you think militant young guerrillas are a creation of the 1970s, you're in for a surprise when you view this hour-long ABC-TV adventure series. Here are all of the anti-establishment, anti-military-industrial complex techniques of the bomb-and-run boys transported back in time to 1777, when King George III's Redcoats had the Continental army on the ropes after the battle of Brandywine Creek. Ron Ely plays youthful Jeremy Larkin, a pseudo-Tory sympathizer who is actually the head of a tiny guerrilla group calling itself the Yankee Doodle Society. Fighting alongside the long-haired Jeremy, who's considered (according to the publicity releases) "a fop" by the townspeople, are Isak Poole (Lou Gossett), a blacksmith and former slave, and Henry Abington (Alex Henteloff), a fan of Benjamin Franklin and something of a mechanical genius. It's Henry, spectacles and all, who pushes the contacts that set off the Leydenjars and gunpowder that send the British soldiers flying head over tea kettle in scene after scene. Supporting the Yankee Doodle trio are French actor Philippe Forquet, cast as the Marquis de Lafayette (who turns out to have been 19 when he was commissioned a major general) and Hilarie Thompson as Elizabeth Coats, whose affection for the Revolutionary cause is exceeded only by her affection for the relatively undemonstrative (because the show is aimed at the younger set) Jeremy. Sunday's opener had Jeremy and company defeating the British in two decisive engagements — one of which prevented the occupation of Philadelphia. Jingo suspects that the British will be whipped in some humiliating fashion week after week — culminating ultimately in the success of the American Revolution. Gosh, you didn't know you owed your freedom to the hit-and-run tactics of a trio of kids from Chester, Pa., did you?

"The Young Lawyers" (6:30-7:30 p.m., Mondays, Channels 11-6-9) — Both lawyer and doctor shows are making a comeback this year, and the main problem is telling them apart. In this one's premiere episode, both lawyers and doctors were involved. Two student lawyers, taking advantages of Massachusetts' law that allows law students to try real cases in court under the supervision of a genuine lawyer, defend an intern who is being sued for $50,000 because he touched an injured boy against his father's wishes. The students — played by Zalman King and Judy Pace — are, of course, idealistic, talented (if a bit green) and, because of their lack of experience, willing to be bold and sometimes abrasive. Their mentor is portrayed by Lee J. Cobb, a salty old soul with plenty of know-how.

Judging by the first show, this will be a fairly good series, but if it gets any viewers — with "Gunsmoke," "Red Skelton" and "Laugh-In" as competition — Jingo will be surprised. Also, if you can't keep this one straight from "The Store Front Lawyers," you're forgiven.

"The Silent Force" (7:30-8 p.m., Mondays, Channels 11-6) — If the first half-hour is any indication, "The Silent Force" is going to be a modern-day extension of "The Untouchables," with nearly as much violence and with the government agents having even fewer scruples than Elliot Ness' crew. "The Silent Force" is a trio of undercover agents — a lusty young white man, a sexy but tough chick and an experienced but token black — who fight "The Syndicate." The series is supposed to show us the government is fighting organized crime, another of those cancers in our society. Yet, there will be no mention of the Mafia in the entire series. Perhaps they're not organized enough.

At any rate, episode number one had our heroes (Ed Nelson, Percy Rodrigues and Lynda Day using almost any questionable tactic they could think of to stop a corrupt district attorney use "organized crime" to get him the governor's seat. If the ends justify the means, then "The Silent Force" is an admirable example of justice at work. If not, we could get into all sorts of moralistic discussions. Suffice it to say that so far the series is a bit too melodramatic for Jingo's tastes.

"Make Room for Granddaddy" (7-7:30 p.m., Wednesdays, Channels 11-6-9) — Well, we made room for Granddaddy Wednesday evening, and do you know what? The old man had hardening of the arteries! There he was, in the same old living room, with the same old family and (it seemed) the same old gags — and Jingo could only reflect with sadness on the brilliant Danny Thomas' reluctance to adapt his format to changing times. Lucille Ball, for one, has kept up....and so, within the limitations of his personal style, has Red Skelton. But Danny has, with this resumption of his former series, condemned himself to exactly the sort of standing-set-with-laugh-track show that Jingo had thought was passe years ago. In the first sequence, Danny and his TV wife, Marjorie Lord, reassembled their family (Sherry Jackson, Angela Cartwright, Rusty Hamer, Hans Conried) and added a six-year-old newcomer, Michael Hughes, to the roster as Sherry's son. It was all very innocuous, and it may well be that the American viewing public will take with open arms to this latest manifestation of Thomas' familiar blend of slapstick and sentiment. But Jingo, for one, fears that unless Danny opens up a few windows and takes a walk occasionally, there won't be many visitors in his air-tight living room in the weeks to come.

Partridges Should Make It a Success

7:30-8 Channels 11-9 — The Partridge Family is a series which has lots of ingredients which should make it a success. There are kids (one, deep-voiced, redhead, Danny Bonaduce in a howl), a dog, soft rock music, snappy dialogue, a teen-age sensation type (David Cassidy) and a pretty, witty Momma (Shirley Jones). Momma, a recent widow, is conned by her kids (Susan Dey, Jeremy Gelbwaks and Suzanne Crough, in addition to Cassidy and Bonaduce) into making a recording in the family garage. Danny, the financial and business genius of the family, by sheer persistance makes Dave Madden, as a record executive, listen to the recording. It becomes a hit. So the family buys an old school bus, paints it in psychedelic colors, adds a sign; "Careful, Nervous Mother Driving," and takes off on a show business career.

6:30-7 Channel 11 — The Brady Bunch is back with Don Drysdale the special quest. Seems Mike (Robert Reed) is designing a house for the former Dodger great and he introduces him to the boys since Greg (Barry Williams) is a baseball nut. With Don's words of encouragement ringing in his ears, Greg goes on to dream of greatness and a big bonus as a major league pitcher.

7-7:30 Channels 11-9 — Nanny and the Professor is back for its first full season, with Richard Long, Juliet Mills, children and dog. (Change the actors names and that applies to just about every returning situation comedy). Anyway, a friend of the professor's is thinking of getting married and he wants the prof to run statistics through the computer to see if he and the girl would be compatible.

7:30-8 Channels 2-7 — Headmaster has a funnier show than its opening. While it deals with a person's right to be an individual, it does so with very good humor. Maureen Arthur stars as a creative writing teacher who is really good at her job. She also looks great in those miniskirts she wears and it's that which causes the problem.

7:30-9 Channel 5 — There's a touch of "Jane Eyre" to "A Love to Remember" on The Name of the Game. Gene Barry's fist starring show of the season has him attending a class reunion where, he learns, he had apparently played a joke on a girl who had a crush on him. That's what she tells him, as she takes him to her beach cottage for a midnight swim. Only she disappears and when he tries to find her, he is told she has been dead for many years.

8-8:30 Channels 11-9 — That Girl starts its fifth and last (Marlo Thomas has just announced her retirement from the series) season with one of its funniest episodes. Ted Bessell, as Don, decides to propose. He buys a "used" engagement ring from a friend, gives it to Marlo, then leaves on a business trip to Washington. The friend then asks Marlo for the ring back, because his broken engagement has been mended.

8-10 Channels 2-7 — Gambling and women occupy "The Cincinnati Kid" on The Friday Night Movies. Steve McQueen is the kid, a gambler who wants to be a poker-playing king and Edward G. Robinson is the man who holds the title the kid wants. Women in the kid's life are Ann-Margret and Tuesday Weld, and your reaction to all this depends a lot on how you feel about poker-faced poker players and poker-faced women.

8:30-9 Channels 11-9 — Love, American Style returns in a 30 minute format and two short and fairly funny vignettes: in one Judy Strangis is a proper young lady who, upon accepting Wes Stern's proposal, asks him to ask her father for her hand. Dad (Keenan Wynn) is "upstate" — in prison. In the other, Barbara Rush and Harry Morgan play two married-but-not-to-each-other, who arrange a motel rendezvous and learn they're not very good at such things.

9-10 Channel 5 — Madlyn Rhue disappears from Bracken's World in a gory manner: her head is bashed in. That's how Peter Haskell, as her husband, finds her when he returns home a bit late — having been detained by seductive Laraine Stephens. Not only is his wife dead, but his son is missing. Eventually the boy is returned by two hippies (Lou Antonio and Lane Bradbury) who are not above asking for "gifts" but say they are above murder. Stuart Whitman is the policeman in charge of the investigation.

9-10 Channels 11-9 — This is Tom Jones opens with a strong show which was taped very close to air date (too close for everyone's comfort), so what follows may have a change or two by air time. Anyway, this is certain; guests are Anne Bancroft and Burt Bacharach, a lot of Bacharach-Hal David songs will be sung (including the lovely "A House Is Not a Home" sung during Tom's "quiet spot"), and the Ace Trucking Company, regular this season, are involved in a lot of lunacy.

The 1970-71 Faculty Recital Series will open with an all-Beethoven program as part of the university's Beethoven bicentennial celebration. Performing in the recital, to be held at 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 25, in Harper Hall, will be instructor Edward Rath, standing, and, seated left to right, instructor Thomas LeVeck, associate professor Theodore Rehl, and Mrs. Rehl, lecturer.

Business Group To Study New Yule Decorations

KAUKAUNA — Members of the Kaukauna Business Associates Monday night named a committee to study types of new Christmas decorations to be purchased for the 1971 holiday season.

Action was taken after Victor Luedtke, Park Department superintendent, who has charge of the decorations, noted that all old anchors for the decorations and the decorations themselves are in need of replacement.

Noting the many dollars spent by the city to beautify it, Luedtke said that action should be taken immediately on replacing decorations.

Named to the committee were David Hartjes, David Flanagan, Paul Hietpas, Joseph Arnoldussen and David Raven. Christmas stores will be open until 9 p.m. daily from the Friday after Thanksgiving to the Christmas holiday.

Auxiliary Nets $270 on Poppies

KAUKAUNA — Members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary reported 1,273 buddy poppies sold in a recent campaign resulting in about $270 added to the treasury for relief work among needy families of veterans in the city.

Women volunteers sold the memorial flowers on streets and contacted business places for the purchase of posters. The national VFW receives $226 for the poppies supplied with the remainder of money raised to be used locally, according to Mrs. James McDaniel, coordinator for the campaign. Pittsburgh Wins, Begins Showdown Set With Mets

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

The wacky National League East title fight resumes tonight with all three contenders looking, for a change, like contenders.

New York, tied for second place with Chicago 2½ games behind Pittsburgh, opens a three game series with the Pirates. The Cubs, meanwhile, will be watching the numbers on the scoreboard and the Philadelphia Phillies on the field.

The Pirates prepared for their showdown with New York by whipping Montreal 8-0 Thursday night as Luke Walker scattered seven hits and Gene Alley drove in four runs with a triple and two singles.

Chicago moved into a second place tie with the idle Mets by whacking St. Louis 7-1 on Ken Holtzman's seven-hitter.

In other games Thursday, San Diego shut out Atlanta 5-0, Baltimore took Detroit 7-4, Boston edged Washington 4-3 and Milwaukee dropped California 7-3.

Pittsburgh and Chicago, both staggering lately, looked solid for a change Thursday. And the idle Mets, trying to pump some life back into their pennant hopes, rallied in the late innings for a pair of victories against Philadelphia earlier in the week.

The Pirates, who had dropped two of three to the Expos before Thursday, gave Walker plenty of offensive support, battering four Montreal pitchers for 15 hits.

Alley was the key man, sin- bunched five hits in the third inning. He singled another home in the sixth and then tripled for two more in the seventh.

"Everybody had doubted that we could win," said Alley. "But we're still in first place. They have to catch us."

The Mets would need a three-game sweep to accomplish that this weekend. New York and Chicago each have seven games to play and the Pirates have six.

The Cubs, who play three games in Philadelphia before finishing the season with four in New York, kept their hopes healthy by whipping the Cardinals.

Chicago shattered a 1-1 tie with four runs in the sixth inning with a bad-hop single and a juggled grounder playing key roles in the rally.

Glenn Beckert opened with a walk and raced to third when Tommy Davis' bouncer hopped through the Astroturf infield for a single. Ron Santo bounced to Dal Maxvill but the Cardinal shortstop juggled the potential double play ball and had to settle for a forceout as Beckert scored.

Jim Hickman doubled one run home and Randy Hundley's single and a wild throw by Lou Brock resulted in two more. Billy Williams' 200th hit of the season helped Chicago's two-run rally in the seventh.

Dave Roberts pitched a six-hitter and Clarence Gaston and Nate Colbert powered home runs as San Diego blanked Atlanta for the second straight night.

A pair of two-run homers in his first two swings by Tony Conigliaro carried Boston past Washington.

Paul Blair had four hits including a pair of homers as Baltimore tagged Detroit. Mike Cuellar won his 24th game.

Hayhoe Injured

Forrest Gregg May Have to Start Against The Falcons Sunday

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — When old pro Forrest Gregg eased out of semi-retirement last week, he announced, "I consider myself strictly a backup man at guard."

But that was a week ago. Because of its violent nature, changes occur rapidly in professional football and it now appears the Packers' much-decorated veteran may be seeing more combat than he had anticipated.

In fact, it could well be that Gregg, activated only because reserve guard Dave Bradley had to undergo shoulder surgery, will be starting at right tackle in Sunday afternoon's Lambeau Field argument with the Altanta Falcons.

This became a distinct possibility when the California colossus, Bill Hayhoe, suffered a pulled muscle in his left calf during Thursday morning's practice.

2 Able-Bodied Tackles

That development left Gregg and Francis Peay as the only able-bodied tackles in evidence, at least for the moment. The 6-foot-8, 267-pound Hayhoe had been counted upon to start at right tackle Sunday in place of Dick Himes, already hobbled by a knee injury incurred in last Sunday's 40-0 loss to Detroit.

"If Hayhoe isn't healthy," Coach Phil Bengtson later affirmed, "Gregg will have to start."

Excluded from most work following the injury, Hayhoe wore an ice pack on the aching calf for the balance of the practice.

Although he hadn't planned on such an active role, Gregg responded to the prospect of a starting role with all the alacrity of the proverbial firehorse.

"It all depends on how Bill comes along," he said, then solemnly appended, "but I'll be ready."

Gregg, a member of the coaching staff until he was prevailed upon to don a uniform, was happy to report, "I feel much better this week . . . My timing was so bad last week

Lawrence University's Vikings hope to clear up some disturbing questions about their offense when they make their 1970 home debut Saturday afternoon against Knox.

The 1:30 p.m. Midwest Conference game will be the Vikes' only Lawrence Bowl appearance in the first four contests of the season.

LU's offense, expected to be explosively powerful this campaign, sputtered in last Saturday's initial start, a 14-0 loss to defending champion St. Olaf. The Vikes, who averaged 25.6 points and 356 yards a game last season, were held to a net of 161 yards by the Oles.

The Vikes wasted their only two scoring opportunities against St. Olaf. A first-quarter drive was stopped at the Ole 2-yard line, and a last-period surge got as far as the St. Olaf 23.

Knox, meanwhile, had better luck getting on the scoreboard, although its margin of defeat last Saturday was identical to LU's. The Siwashers, who at one time held a 14-13 lead over Ripon, eventually bowed, 28-14, to the Redmen.

In other Saturday MC games, St. Olaf goes on the road to face Coe (a 10-7 loser to Grinnell last week), while Ripon travels to Carleton to face the Carls (who swooned, 57-6, before Cornell). In one of the top games, contenders Grinnell and Monmouth will battle on the Scots' turf.

Monmouth beat Beloit last weekend, but the game doesn't count in the standings because of the Bucs' use of freshmen.

Last season, the Ron Roberts-coached Vikings scored a 28-6 win over Knox behind a crushing ground game. Steve Rechner and Lance Alwin spearheaded the LU attack, just as they are being counted on to do this season.

Rechner gained 96 yards rushing and scored once against Knox, while Alwin picked up 94 yards and scored twice. In the 1970 inaugural, Alwin amassed 77 yards in 17 carries, while Rechner gained 56 in 15 tries.

Ralph Norman, who ran 45 yards for Knox' only touchdown against the Vikes last year, is back to lead the attack. He scored one of the TDs against Ripon last Saturday.

The Siwash picked up 213 yards against a strong Ripon defense with 83 of them coming through the air on seven completions in 17 tries.

Sophomore Mark Cebulski, who completed nine of 15 passes for 38 yards in his debut, is expected to start again at QB for LU Saturday.

BY RON WITT
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

A pair of "exhibition game" successes behind them, Fox Valley Lutheran gets down to the business of Midwest Prep Conference competition Saturday afternoon as Milwaukee University School invades the Foxes' field for a 2 p.m. clash.

The battle with the Wildcats looms as the toughest assignment to date for FVL, which has dumped Little Chute, 20-12, and Onalaska Luther, 36-0, in early-season action. University School is also unbeaten in two starts, having posted consecutive 30-6 and 7-0 triumphs over out-of-state foes Minneapolis Blake and St. Louis Country Day, respectively.

In other MPC openers Saturday, defending champion Milwaukee Lutheran greets Beaver Dam Wayland Academy; Wisconsin Lutheran plays host to Racine Lutheran; and Martin Luther (replacing Concordia this year) travels to Watertown Northwestern.

Milwaukee Lutheran's Knights, who swept through six games to the league championship last year, are again the favorites in the 1970 race according to a poll of MPC coaches. Wisconsin Lutheran in the pick for the runnerup slot, and University School, second a year ago with a 5-1 record, has been tabbed for third.

Fox Lutheran, which tied for fifth in 1969 with a 2-4 mark, isn't considered title material, but the Foxes have shown enough spunk and talent in their first two outings to serve notice they could be spoilers in the MPC.

In addition to wanting to keep their season record unblemished, the Foxes will have an additional motive of revenge when they test the Wildcats. The Milwaukee team grabbed an 18-6 lead at the half in last year's game and eventually outlasted FVL, 34-20.

American League Playoff to Open in Minnesota Oct. 3

BOSTON (AP) — American League President Joe Cronin announced Thursday that the best-of-five playoff series between the Baltimore Orioles and Minnesota Twins will open Oct. 3 in the West champions' park and continue without any day off for travel.

Cronin scheduled the first two games in Minnesota, with the third Oct. 5 at Baltimore. Fourth and fifth games, if necessary, will be played in the Orioles' park Oct. 6 and 7, with the winner representing the American League in the World Series.

Knicks Triumph Over Detroit

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The New York Knickerbockers, getting 16 points each from Willis Reed and Walt Frazier, jumped to a 53-40 halftime lead on the way to an easy 100-86 victory over the Detroit Pistons in a National Basketball Association exhibition game Thursday night.

76ers Rally to Defeat Bullets

SALISBURY, Md. (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers rallied from seven points down in the final period and went on to top the Baltimore Bullets 131-121 Thursday night in a National Basketball Association exhibition schedule opener for both teams.

Baltimore led 107-100 with nine minutes to play, but Philadelphia, sparked by Hal Greer, Billy Cunningham and Archie Clark, ran off a 17-3 string against the Bullets.

Brewers Finish at Home With 7-3 Win

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Brewers came in with the Angels and concluded with tears Thursday, wrapping up their first home season as the Milwaukee delegation to the American League.

"It was a good way to bring down the curtain," general manager Marvin Milkes said after Milwaukee won 7-3 over California, the club that had helped restore baseball to the city last spring by whipping the Brewers 12-0.

"We did a lot of moving," Milkes said of the club that is now contending for fourth place in the league's West Division after finishing in last place last season as the Seattle Pilots.

The Brewers have been especially annoyed this season with just how close they moved to doing even better. They have played 59 games in which one run decided the outcome, winning only 27 of the narrow decisions.

Milkes' eyes showed signs of tears at the thought of the two-year-old club's climb out of an untalented bullpen with a crew they used to laugh at. "I guess I'm just a sentimental slob," he said.

Talent eventually began to emerge, even from the bullpen: reliever Ken Sanders, who had thought last year of quitting the business, ranked at times this season as the league leader in the earned-run category.

Tommy Harper, a Pilot freak who led the league last season in stolen bases, became—as a Brewer—one of only five men in major league history to hit at least 30 homers and steal at least 30 bases in one year.

Harper helped wrap the home season Thursday with his 31st round-trip. And Ted Savage had four RBIs.

The afternoon affair drew 6,549 spectators, giving the Brewers a home total of 934,820, or an average of about 12,800 per home appearance.

New Contract

Before the game, the Brewers held a news conference to confirm reports that manager Dave Bristol was getting a contract through the 1972 season, with a salary increase they didn't disclose.

"Last year they called a news conference to fire me," Bristol said. "I like it better this way."

Bristol, 37, was thinking about his dismissal a year ago by Cincinnati, after the Redlegs dropped from title contention to a third-place finish.

Milwaukee, Milkes said "made tremendous strides under Bristol's leadership."

2-Run Single

Harper led off the first inning with his 395-foot homer. Dave

Bert Greene Shoots 65 in 'Green Island'

Shakes Off Effects Of Bursitis to Take 1-Stroke Advantage

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Bert Greene says his fervor for hunting and fishing equals his desire to play golf, but that his major goal is to win a tournament on the PGA tour.

He may get all three during the $60,000 Green Island Open golf tournament which started Thursday with the Georgia native carving out a five-under-par 65 to take a one-stroke lead into today's second round of the 72-hole event.

"It's great to be home in these pine trees," said Greene, who chatted with writers as Harry Toscano ran into trouble on his final hole and took a bogey five, finishing one shot back at 66 in a tie with Australian Bob Stanton.

"I got to go dove hunting Tuesday on the edge of Alabama and I'm going to try to catch a few bream this afternoon and again tomorrow morning before I tee off," said Greene, who has played in only six tournaments in three months because of bursitis in his left shoulder.

Green said the hot Georgia sun helped his ailing shoulder.

"I was really surprised on my first hole when I made a 35-foot putt for a birdie because putting is usually the first part of your game to go when you lay off awhile," he said.

Green said he had played only two rounds of golf in two weeks.

"I drove well and putted well," Greene said. "I had only one three-putt green and I'll be happy to have just one every round the rest of the week."

Toscano, finishing on the front side, drove his tee shot into some trees on the right of the fairway and than shanked his wedge trying to get out of trouble. He got down in two from 18 feet away for a bogey, which prevented him from gaining a first-round tie.

Stanton played a steady round with two birdies on each side. Another Georgian, Bunky Henry, and Tommy Jacobs were tied at 67, while six players were deadlocked at 70—Richard Crawford, Bobby Greenwood, Bob Stone, John Jacobs, Chris Barker and Byron Comstock.

Max McGee, left, former Green Bay Packer, buys a membership in the new Xavier High School Booster Club from Arnold VandenBoomen. A drive for membership (at $1) is open to anyone wishing to help the athletic program for both boys and girls. A meeting will be held Oct. 7 in the school commons. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Horn Files Debtor's Bankruptcy Petition

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Quarterback Don Horn of the Green Bay Packers has filed a debtor's petition in San Diego, claiming personal bankruptcy.

Horn listed his debts at $137,312 and assets of $5,600. He said much of the debts are the result of an $87,562 promissory note on which Southern California First National Bank has filed a Superior Court suit to foreclose.

Horn, who lives in San Diego, claims a limited partnership in a Sherman Oaks, Calif., land development firm

PACKER PATTER — Bill Hayhoe wasn't the Packers' only casualty Thursday. Defensive tackle Kevin Hardy was forced to leave practice when he damaged a shoulder while hitting the blocking sled.

"The injury doesn't appear to be serious," Bengtson said, "but we'll have to wait and see."

On the brighter side, Travis Williams was running with his old freedom and it appears likely he will see considerable action Sunday, possibly in a starting role.

Gregg May Start At Tackle Sunday

— I felt like I wasn't getting off on count, I felt I was slow.

"Of course, I hadn't had any contact in a long time. But I got some last week, a little in the game, and more this week, so I feel much better."

Should the 8-time all-pro be called upon to start, he will be confronted with an imposing assignment in the form of Claude Humphrey, the Falcons' 6-foot-5, 244-pound left defensive end.

"Humphrey is a good football player," Gregg observed. "He's young and a real comer. I played against him when he was a rookie and again last year and there was all the difference in the world in him last year over his first year.

"And watching him in films this week, it looks like he's getting better all the time."

Whether or not he becomes a major participant, the 14-year veteran is convinced better days are ahead for the Packer attack, held to a mere 114 yards by the Lions.

"There is not any way in the world that we're that bad an offensive team," he insisted. "It's just a matter of us getting together and generating a little spark. We have fine personnel, all the way through.

"I don't, and I can't, explain what happened Sunday. And there was no indication in the pictures of what it was — just that nothing was working.

"But I think offense is played with a certain amount of looseness. Once you get cautious, you don't move the ball."

Whatever his role, Greg will be marking an impressive milestone Sunday afternoon. Forrest, who toiled only on the special teams last weekend, will be appearing in his 175th consecutive NFL game.

He thus will break a third place tie with former 49er Leo Nomellini in this category and move within five games of runnerup Dick Modzelelewski, who made 180 successive appearances.

If he can stay healthy, and the 36-year-old Texan has been virtually indestructible, he can eclipse the all-time record of former teammate Jim Ringo before the year is out.

Ringo, now offensive line coach of the Chicago Bears, played in 182 consecutive games for the Packers and Philadel-

May doubled, and scored on Savage's single.

The Brewers then came up with a four-run second inning on singles by Phil Roof and Ted Kubiak, Harper's one-run single, Hegan's one-run single, an error, a walk that loaded the bases, and Savage's two-run single.

Winning pitcher John Morris allowed the Angels three runs in the sixth before being relieved by John Gelner.

Roof, a former Brave, said Bristol did much to whip the sluggish Pilots into better Brewers.

"We play together now," Roof said. "A lot of things didn't jell earlier. I think the front office made a wise decision in extending Dave Bristol's contract."

The Brewers open a series tonight in Chicago with a twi-night double header. They've seven games left on the 1970 slate.

Oppose Death Penalty

Young, Warren Back FBI Role on Campus

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Wisconsin's top lawman and the top administrator of the University of Wisconsin campus here have joined in backing President Nixon's crime bill proposals calling for FBI powers on the nation's campuses.

But they differed slightly on Nixon's call for the death penalty in bombings linked to terrorism.

Madison Campus Chancellor Edwin Young said that he personally opposes the death penalty for crimes, and that state laws should prevail in such matters, but endorsed the addition of FBI powers in investigating some crimes on campuses because local police forces lack the special training and equipment needed to investigate sophisticated crimes.

Atty. Gen. Robert Warren said that the proven success record of the FBI shows that they have the skills needed to confront the advent of the bomb as a political weapon on college campuses — and added that the bill is going to pass the Congress with the death penalty provision attached.

FBI Needed

Young said that he was not endorsing the concept of a national police force, but that the experience and skills of the FBI are needed in the wake of the advent of campus violence.

Nixon explained his additions to the crime bill pending by pointing to the UW's Sterling Hall bombing that killed a postgraduate researcher on Aug. 24. Four suspects are on the FBI's "most wanted" list following the FBI investigation of that attack.

Young said that the cooperation of the FBI was needed in the Madison case despite the fact that Madison is a relatively large city with a trained police force.

"What if this had happened in Platteville?" he asked.

The move to give the FBI powers of investigation of bombings and arson on college campuses is a recognition of the sizable role of federal financing for public and private higher education, said Young.

Deal With Dangers

Young said that the dangers of campus violence must be dealt with realistically.

"Look at it from the point of view of these people," he said of lawmen.

"Look at the Weathermen," he said of the violent offshoot of the defunct Students for a Democratic Society.

"If they do all that they say they do, they are a national menace," said Young.

But Young added that he personally opposes the death penalty. The crime bill would make the bombings a federal offense punishable by death penalities handed down by federal courts.

"If you don't have a death penalty for murder, why should you have one for bombing?" he asked.

No Death Penalty

"The most serious thing that happened at Sterling Hall was the murder, and the state should procede against that," he said. "State law in Wisconsin provides for no death penalty, and the federal legislation should not supercede that standard," he said.

Warren said that he agreed that the state law should be upheld, but suggested that reports indicate that the legislation will pass Congress and that the death penalty will be enacted.

The bill is expected to be cleared by Congress before the year ends. One version has passed the Senate, and a version backed by Nixon has been reported favorably by a House committee.

The differences are expected to be resolved in favor of the Nixon plan, according to Washington reports.

afternoon, Oatman was asked by many loud-voiced protesters who wanted to know how it could be handled differently.

Some favored a drawing of names in Madison, a public drawing of names in the armory or a method of giving preferential treatment to landowners.

None of them wanted it like it was.

At Outagamie, the scene was quite different.

The county clerk's office there had a total of 220 permits to distribute.

Conservation Warden Dale Morey and sheriff's department officials were concerned that trouble could develop among those waiting in line when the permits began dwindling, but the crowd, estimated at over 400, remained orderly.

When the courthouse door was opened for the start of the sale at 1 p.m., Vincent Galassie, 627 Paris St., Menasha was the first one in line. He had arrived at the Courthouse about 2:30 a.m. and when he found no one else at the door he caught a nap in his car.

"A few others started arriving about 4:45 so we moved up to the door," Galassie said. Many of the early arrivals brought folding chairs so they could be more comfortable. Lunch bags and thermos bottles were in evidence everywhere.

About noon, a man arrived in a sharp-looking business suit, walked up to a woman in the line and handed her a carry-out lunch from a restaurant. "That's a real devotion," a young fellow said. "My wife wouldn't stand here in line for me if I promised her a fur coat."

By 8 a.m. over 100 people were in line. Some Courthouse workers evidently were not aware that the permits were being issued because about 9 a.m. the sheriff's department received word that there was going to be a riot and that people were congregating for a rush on the Courthouse.

Morey arrived at the Courthouse about one-half hour before the 1 p.m. starting time and the permits were in a sealed box.

"You'd be surprised at the number of phone calls I received and some from pretty influential people," Morey said. "They all wanted me to set aside a couple of permits for them. It's really something what people try to do."

Sheriff Calvin Spice, who had several deputies on hand to see that things went smoothly, also admitted to getting a number of calls. "They'll try everything and anything," Spice said.

When the sale started, 10 from the line were allowed to enter the clerk's office at a time. This continued until the supply was exhausted. Morey then thanked those who were still waiting for their patience and orderliness.

Segregation in Labor Attributed to Unions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Nixon administration official has charged unions with throwing their weight around Congress to perpetuate segregation in the ranks of organized labor.

"I've found that labor unions have been jawboning on civil rights and lining up with Congress on civil rights bills for so long that they feel they're above and beyond having to comply themselves," Assistant Secretary of Labor Arthur A. Fletcher told a House Subcommittee.

Fletcher, who heads the department's division of wages and standards, is the government's top job rights officer.

Fletcher told a House Armed Service subcommittee Thursday many industries are willing to comply with federal civil rights regulations on defense contractors. But other cases have to be taken to court.

Under Contract

He said he has learned one large industry is operating under a union contract that excludes nonwhites. Although he would not name the industry, he said the Office of Contract Compliance will investigate.

Such practices, he said, keep minorities out of the defense industry. "It's just about impossible for them — the industry — to be in compliance.

Union leaders, Fletcher said, "feel they have a lot of friends on the Hill; they put a lot of money into congressional campaigns.

Playing All Cards

"Labor is playing all those cards. It's playing all those cards to be blunt with you," he said.

As a result of labor actions, Fletcher said, there is a widespread feeling in government that although President Nixon backs equal-opportunity programs, labor will be able to hold back minority workers through friends on key congressional committees.

Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., chairman of the subcommittee, said the panel has found no evidence defense work is suffering as a result of federal requirements that contractors hire and train minority workers.

Hats Burn Hot, Fast FTC Warns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission says thousands of highly flammable red berets made in Italy are being sold daily to American women.

The chenille berets ignite quickly and "burn with great intensity, release a large amount of heat and are extremely difficult to extinguish," the FTC said in a general warning to the public Thursday.

At least 28,000 berets have been imported for sale in this country through firms in Chicago and New York and many thousands more probably have been sold, said Edward B. Finch, acting director of the agency's textiles and furs division.

Took 30 Seconds

To demonstrate the hazard, Finch touched a match to one — and it immediately burst into flames and within 30 seconds was a gray heap of ashes.

Known exporters of the berets are Donatello, Santelli & Figlio; Kreiger Ltd. with Straw Industria; and Bing of Florence, all of Florence, Italy.

Known importers are Accesso Fashions and O'Connor-Goldstein Milinery and Wig Co., both of Chicago; and Mr. Grossman & Sons, Inc., and Betmar Hats, Inc.; Four Seasons Hat Club, Inc.; and Moses L. Aronson, Inc., all of New York.

Nixon Must Sign

ABM Site Funds Voted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $19.9-billion military purchasing bill including two new sites for the Safeguard antiballistic missile system has been approved by a Senate-House conference.

The agreement, subject to approval of both houses before going to President Nixon, is $1 billion under the Nixon budget.

The ABM system, a subject of Senate debate for two years, will be expanded to four locations. But the conference accepted the Senate's elimination of funds to begin deployment of a Chinese-oriented area defense system.

The conference restored $700 million which had been cut by the Senate. The House version carried $20.5 billion, about $100 million less than the Pentagon asked.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Thursday conferees slashed the budget for research and development by $300 million.

The key change in the conference agreement, Stennis said, involves Navy shipbuilding.

Conferees eliminated $152 million for a new aircraft carrier but approved $435 million for several new ships, including two nuclear-powered submarines, which the House had added to the President's budget.

Stennis said Defense Department spokesmen spent a lot of time "clamoring for what they lost" in the Senate bill. "I don't think we've made any modifications that in any way impair the efficiency of military preparedness or its effectiveness," he said.

The final version of the bill carries $75 million for development of the B1 bomber. The Senate had approved $50 million and the House $100 million.

Visa Denied For Ex-Dictator

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The U.S. government will not grant a visa to former Cuban dictator Fulgencio Batista to go to Florida for his brother's funeral, a U.S. Embassy official said today.

The former Caribbean island strongman has been living in exile in the nearby jet-set resort of Estoril since fleeing Cuba on New Year's Eve in 1958 before the advance of Fidel Castro's rebels.

Batista's brother, Francisco, died Thursday in Miami after a heart attack.

Robbery Suspect With Hostages Surrenders

SEATTLE (AP) — A heavily armed bank robbery suspect who held three persons hostage aboard a small boat in the San Juan Islands surrendered to the Coast Guard early today.

A Coast Guard spokesman said all four occupants of the boat were taken aboard the 82-foot-cutter Pt. Richmond.

The man, believed to be a 26-year-old jail escapee, was said by Canadian authorities to have robbed a Victoria bank of $5,000 to $7,000 Thursday, shooting two policemen who were not seriously wounded.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police in small boats had remained 500 yards away from the commandeered 22-foot sailboat as it drifted with the Pacific tide near the border.

RCMP boats which had attempted to board the vessel had earlier been driven off by gunfire.

Had Four Guns

Authorities said the man was armed with three rifles and a shotgun.

Witnesses said the man who held up the bank tried unsuccessfully to escape in a bus, then commandeered a taxi.

Officers said he made his way north up the Saanich Peninsula, firing at pursuers, and hijacked the sailboat, which was surrounded by four police boats as he sailed it into Satellite channel, a Pacific inlet.

nounced by the Jordanian government, and each one has broken down within minutes after being proclaimed.

The resignation of Jordanian Prime Minister Mohamed Daoud in Cairo Thursday may have been a factor in opening the way for a settlement of the fighting.

Hussein accepted Daoud's resignation and asked the present Jordanian military government to stay on until a new cabinet is formed.

Arafat has been saying all along the guerrillas will not stop fighting until the military government is toppled or Hussein dismisses it.

Guerrilla broadcasts from Damascus and Baghdad said the army was making tank and artillery assaults on Palestinian position in Amman and in Irbid through the night. Several thrusts at Irbid were halted, according to the guerrillas.

Fifty-eight foreigners, 32 of them Americans, were evacuated from Amman to Beirut Thursday, and three planes stood by for further evacuations of foreigners today.

Sophomore-Accented TCU To Meet Badgers

MADISON (AP)— Among the University of Wisconsin's football problems in the last pair of dismal seasons is the problem of youth: too many sophomores and not enough calloused critters.

The problem may work to the Badgers' advantage Saturday when Texas Christian University gallops into Camp Randall Stadium with a squad of greenhorns to duel a group of thoroughly broken, well-ridden veterans.

TCU has seven sophomores on defense and three on offense, representing what a spokesman gamely calls "the best crop of sophomores we have ever had."

True, the Badgers are still relatively young. But most of the Wisconsin team members carry some impressive saddle sores from previous campaigns.

Must Game

TCU comes to Madison in what its spokesman says is a "must" game, explaining his school has intentions of developing the experience necessary "to go to the Cotton Bowl next year."

The visitors are counting on big things from quarterback Steve Judy and halfback Bob Davis to develop "one of the toughest run-pass attacks in the Southwest this season."

Davis, in two games this year —against Purdue and Texas-Arlington—averaged better than nine yards a play. Judy completed 21 passes for 244 yards against Purdue.

If those two aren't working Saturday, TCU may be able to count on sophomores Larry Harris and Ray Rhodes, a couple of running backs who fly low.

Harris, the club boasts, covers 100 yards in 9.5 seconds and Rhodes does the dash in :9.7.

The Horned Frogs are favored over Wisconsin, but by only a points.

FVL Opens League Play

that victory was quarterback Roc Bauman, who tallied four of his team's five touchdowns and picked up 67 yards in seven carries. He went on to lead Uniiversity School to a 5-1 record, good for second place, and gained personal all-conference honors.

Now a 190-pound senior, Bauman is again back to lead the Wildcats' fortunes. In addition to doing the quarterbacking, Bauman also handles the punting and kickoff returns.

In 31st Season

University School coach Ken Laird, a native of Black Creek and a former assistant coach at Appleton High School, has 11 lettermen back in this his 31st season at the Wildcat helm. Top players besides Bauman include 210-pound tackle Bob Davis, 170-pound offensive end and linebacker John Schieffer, 150-pound split end Dennis Cahill, and 185-pound center Al Gordon.

Mike Spencer (165) and Paul Dale (195), both juniors, and 140-pound senior scatback Jerry Yashiro complement Bauman in the backfield, which operates out of an I Formation and Wishbone T.

Fox Valley comes off its best performance to face the Cats. Last week, coach Dave Umnus' crew rolled up 325 yards total while limiting Onalaska just 89. FVL also intercepted three Cadet aerials in the rout, which saw the home team take a commanding 28-0 edge at the half.

Key offensive players in the 5-touchdown barrage for the Foxes were Jeff Grow and Bill Lecker. Grow gained 119 yards in 19 carries and scored twice as did Lecker, who hit on six of seven passes and ran for a pair of 2-point conversions.

Linebacker Charlie Broehm accounted for the final Foxes score when he picked off a Cadet pass and rambled 53 yards to pay dirt.

Neenah Scores Volleyball Win

The Rockets rallied from a 14-10 deficit in the second set to tie the match.

Neenah's Jayvees stopped the Terrors three times.

War Prisoners Discussed by 2 Candidates

Obey and LeTendre Have Mixed Views On Letter Campaign

The plight of U.S. prisoners of war in North Vietnam prompted comment Thursday from both candidates in the 7th District Congressional election.

Rep. David Obey, D-Wausau, announced that more than 4,500 messages from district residents have been sent to North Vietnamese delegates to the Paris peace talks, urging fair and humane treatment for POW's.

Meanwhile, in a speech prepared for delivery tonight in Neillsville, Republican candidate Andre LeTendre of Wausau warned that the North Vietnamese are seeking to use the prisoners "as bait to lure the United States into an accelerated withdrawal from Southeast Asia."

He said offers to release prisoners if all U.S. troops are withdrawn from South Vietnam by June 30, 1971, should be treated warily. That date would be far in advance of President Nixon's timetable, he said.

Exploitation

"Such obvious exploitation of our prisoners of war and the American people by North Vietnam leaders is an attempt to undermine peace negotiations and weaken the position of our government at the peace table," said LeTendre.

He said "submission to any degree" by this country would be "a noticeable and drastic setback" to U.S. efforts to pull troops out of South Vietnam.

Obey thanked his constituents for the messages, which he forwarded to Xuan Thuy, chief North Vietnamese delegate at the Paris talks. In a letter to Thuy, Obey said the messages express "the unity of the American people on this question."

They also urge the North Vietnamese to identify all prisoners being held, release sick or injured prisoners, permit partial inspection of prisoner facilities and permit free exchange of mail between POW's and their families.

Skeptical of Results

LeTendre referred to the current nationwide letter-writing campaign, expressing skepticism over the likelihood that the North Vietnamese would respond favorably.

"The North Vietnamese are apparently immune to concerned efforts by the American people to facilitate release of these prisoners by recognized means and channels," LeTendre said. He referred both to the current efforts and to a nationwide Jaycee drive during his tenure last year as national Jaycee president.

Obey commented, somewhat more hopefully, "While no one can say for certain that these citizen messages will bring about improved POW conditions in North Vietnam, action by concerned Americans can, at the very least, assist in focusing worldwide public opinion on the POW problem." He urged citizens to take all opportunities to sign petitions being circulated by various groups and individuals.

If we gave the usual used car guarantee, we'd have to change our guarantee.

The usual used car guarantee goes something like this:

"If anything goes wrong, you pay half of the repairs and we'll pay half."

Ours goes like this:

"We guarantee the free repair or replacement of every major working part* for 30 days or 1,000 miles. Whichever comes first."

We call it the VW 100% Guarantee. And, for the record, we aren't about to change it.

It covers all the cars below.

Irish Duel Purdue

Penn State, OSU Put Status on Line In Top Grid Tests

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Penn State's fourth-ranked Nittany Lions could be at one disadvantage when they play Saturday at Colorado—the hosts will be in charge of the halftime show.

The Lions won the first football meeting of the two schools, 27-3 at Penn State last year, and afterward Colorado Coach Eddie Crowder protested the halftime show had lasted too long, giving Penn State an advantage

The Penn State-Colorado meeting is the nationally televised game, ABC at 3 p.m. CDT, on a day when No. 1 Ohio State opens its season at home against Texas A&M and second-ranked Texas plays at Texas Tech, a rival from the unpredictable Southwest Conference.

In other games involving the Top Ten teams in The Associated Press poll, No. 3 Stanford is at Oregon; No. 5 Mississippi plays Kentucky at Jackson, Miss.; Purdue is at No 6 Notre Dame; No. 7 Southern California is at Iowa; Army is at No 8 Nebraska; No. 20 Air Force plays No. 9 Missouri at St Louis and No. 10 Michigan is at Washington.

31 Winning Seasons

Penn State, which has had 31 straight non-losing seasons, opened this year with a 55-7 thrashing of Navy last Saturday to run its winning streak to 23 games and its unbeaten string to 31.

The Penn State offense counts heavily on the running of fullback Franco Harris and halfback Lydell Mitchell. With such stars as All - America tackle Mike Reid graduated, the defense looks to such as linebackers Jack Ham and Gary Hull.

No. 18 Colorado, a 16-7 winner over Indiana last weekend, counts on running back Ward Walsh to help take up the slack left with the graduation of All-American Bob Anderson. End Herb Orvis keys the defense.

In putting its No. 1 ranking on the line for the first time, Ohio State will be meeting a team that has won its first two games and already has tasted the sweetness of an upset.

Texas A&M opened the season by beating Wichita State and then upset Louisiana State 20-18 at Baton Rouge, La.

Fourteen regulars, seven each on offense and defense, are back from last year's Ohio State team that posted an 8-1 record Rex Kern and Ron Macijowski once again will handle the quarterbacking duties. Kern has been hampered by injuries in practice. Defensive leadership again will fall to rover man Jack Tatum.

Texas A&M will count heavily on sophomores. They came through big for the Aggies in their first two games

Other big games Saturday include Oklahoma State at No. 11 Houston at night, Tulsa at No. 12 Arkansas No 13 Florida at Alabama, Oregon State at No. 14 Oklahoma, Northwestern at No. 15 UCLA, Virginia Military at No. 16 West Virginia, No 17 Tennessee vs. Auburn at Birmingham, Ala , and Miami of Florida at No. 19 Georgia Tech.

Sales Decline At Koehring

Machinery Maker Reports Drop in 9-Month Earnings

Koehring Co., Milwaukee-based machinery manufacturer with its farm division based in Appleton, has reported sales of $184 million for the nine months ended Aug. 31, a drop from the $187,211,000 as restated for the same period last year.

The earnings were reported at $5,065,000 or $1.51 per share, compared with $6,582,000 or $2 11 a share, as restated for 1969.

Third quarter sales were $60,137,000, with earnings of $1,680,000 or 50 cents a share, compared with $61,326,000 in sales for the 1969 third quarter, with earnings of $1,777,000 or 55 cents.

"Operating performance for the third quarter was somewhat better than anticipated although, as expected, slightly below last year's levels of sales and profits," said Orville Mertz, president "Measures employed to improve operating efficiencies and to reduce assets progressed according to plan."

He said "the company is exercising its option to sell its equity in Ransomes and Rapier, Ipswich, England, to the majority owner, Newton, Chambers and Co., Sheffield, England. Approximately 40 per cent of the Koehring holdings in the joint venture were sold in early September and the balance is expected to be liquidated by early 1971."

Intrepid Leads, 3-1

Wind Shift Helps Gretel II Victory

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — They've postponed the funeral indefinitely.

Australia's Gretel II was scheduled to be buried at sea Thursday with a fourth and final triumph by America's Intrepid to nail down the America's Cup for another three years.

Instead the Australians rose from the dead—and how—to beat their American rivals in a neck-and-neck homestretch race to bring the best-of-7 match to a 3-1 score for the Americans

It may have been the most exciting finish in all the 119 years of racing for the old trophy. The result of racing luck and a racing mistake of oceanic proportion.

Intrepid's Bill Ficker took it like a skipper should. He blamed it on himself.

The one thing that isn't done in match racing such as for the cup is for a leading boat not to match every move of a trailing boat. If left uncovered, the trailing yacht can go elsewhere gambling on a wind shift or a private puff of wind to sneak by the boat ahead.

That is what happened to Gretel II when she slid past Intrepid a mile from the finish after the U.S. yacht had led all the way around the 24.3-mile triangular course and seemed a sure winner of the race and the cup.

"We felt in a medium breeze we had as good boat speed as they but did not accelerate as fast after tacking so we would cover them loosely," said Ficker. "A loose over is good, but not too loose. On the last leg it was disastrous."

"Tactical error? It was a tactical blunder," said Intrepid's cockpit genius, Steve Van Dyck

Intrepid had a seemingly insurmountable one minute, two second lead rounding the next-to-last buoy and heading for the barn, 4½ miles upwind.

But the wind, which had been a fresh 13 knots from east northeast at the start, had weakened to about six knots. More importantly it had been moving all during the race more to the east

The first session — including instructions — is set for Wednesday.

Pickets Allow Traffic at K-C Plants

NIAGARA, Wis. (AP) — Law enforcement officials reported late Thursday that pickets agreed to allow limited business traffic to resume at some of the Kimberly-Clark Corp. facilities affected by walkouts since Sept. 12.

A truck that pickets had blocked at the Niagara plant was to remain stationary overnight, pending more talks today. But about 200 pickets who had patrolled gates were withdrawn for the duration, officials said

At the Niagara plant, about 700 workers were idle in the contract dispute.

Spokesmen said union members at the firm's plant in Munising, Mich , where about 450 workers were idle, decided "to allow traffic to resume," but didn't specify whether it involved rail or truck traffic.

Munising pickets had halted a locomotive headed for the plant Wednesday.

Rural Development Councils to Organize

BY DAVID WEITZ
Post-Crescent Farm Editor

Rural Development Councils, geared to tackle individual county problems, soon may be taking shape in Outagamie and Winnebago Counties.

Such councils, tailored to needs in individual counties, are being established throughout the state, according to Richard Schuster, University of Wisconsin extension community resource development leader.

Plans for councils in Winnebago and Outagamie Counties were discussed by Schuster recently in a meeting with V. W. Peroutky, Winnebago County agricultural agent and Russell Luckow, Outagamie County agricultural agent.

The councils basically will include members of state, local and federal agencies. Schuster said lay community leaders may assist in developing programs.

Most units will conduct monthly meetings until task forces are organized to study problems, he said.

Experts who form the county groups will provide skills and resources for laymen acting as task force members, noted Schuster.

Problem Areas

Special subcommittees could attack either specific or general problems in the rural areas. Watershed development, recreational study and planning could be conducted by members. "It could be quite a broad, general thing," he said.

In many cases county boards and chambers of commerce may use the groups as advisory units, noted Schuster.

Citizens also may use the councils to discover problems in the community and seek solutions. "Quite close to every citizen there should be a lay citizen representative," said Schuster.

Cooperative Function

Often, he noted, the organizations may aid cooperation between counties by permitting joint advisory action.

A state council will be formed to examine problems referred by counties. The group also could conduct studies for the legislature and may recommend legislative action.

The nucleus of a Winnebago Council may be formed during October, according to Peroutky. He said the group may include from 10 to 15 men.

Small Unit

The council may be "relatively small and not too unwieldy," he remarked. Experts will be sought to aid in problems.

The body may be dubbed the Winnebago County Resources Development Council, he predicted.

Plans for an Outagamie Council are not complete but Luckow said it may work both with rural and urban development.

Now formation is in the "preliminary stages," he said.

In Outagamie County the group will be "strictly advisory," he remarked. After organization the unit probably will not be required to meet monthly, he predicted.

Decade Offers Bright Future for Dairying

BLACK CREEK — Although increasing populations may cause shifts in farming the future is bright for dairymen during the next decade, according to Prof. James Crowley, University of Wisconsin extension dairy specialist.

"I'm very optimistic about the future of dairying," said Crowley, talking to an estimated 240 persons at the annual meeting of the Outagamie County Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

During the next 10 years farmers may feed dairy cattle increasing amounts of supplements to feed to increase efficiency. Non-protein nitrogen, ammonium phosphates and urea, which cannot be utilized as human food, may be emphasized.

"I think we will see new feeds that will be used," he remarked. Dairy cattle rations may be created from cannery wastes, sawdust or cellulose in paper.

Although research has indicated such feed is possible it now is expensive. Population boosts could make such feeds practical, remarked Crowley.

Crowley warned that farming must be an attractive career to draw young men. "That farm's got to meet the competition."

Farms Change

Farm size may increase as well as production and milk quality. "You not only have got to be big you've got to be good."

Contentment can be dangerous, he cautioned. Although dairy systems may now be good constant improvement is needed if farmers are to maintain their status, he noted.

Al Hendrich, association manager, told members the organization soon will receive a mechanical milk testing unit. The machine will electronically analyze the butterfat content in milk.

Herds on two farms were cited for topping a 600 pound butterfat production average during 1970. On the Voight Brothers farm, route 2, Shiocton 52 cows produced an average 17,037 pounds of milk and 634 pounds of butterfat. On the Lloyd Schuessler farm, Kaukauna 40 cows averaged 15,866 pounds of milk and 621 pounds of butterfat.

State Council Disturbed

Farmland-In Short Supply?

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — One of the phases of the Wisconsin environmental protection challenge that has had too little emphasis is the problem of saving the state's prime agricultural lands in the face of the pressure of urban expansion and suburban development, according to a consensus of leading state officers who compose the Natural Resources Council of State Agencies, including Gov. Warren P. Knowles.

The subject was introduced at a Council session by Arthur Kurtz, of the state department of agriculture, who said that not enough heed has been given to the loss of the best agricultural acreage in the state during recent decades of population expansion and urban sprawl.

Mission 70 Priority

Knowles agreed, and said that it ought to be given a high order of priority in his so-called "Mission 70" planning. He emphasized the issue should be given special attention in the planning of transportation improvements in Wisconsin and especially in the location of highways.

The ranking agencies' spokesmen appeared to agree that protection of the best agricultural soils of the state against conversion to non-agricultural uses ought to be given a high priority in the total environmental management concept of the state government.

Tax Problem

Zoning is the most obvious tool that can be employed, one official noted, but he added that the pressure of property taxation in urbanizing districts has a countering effect.

Knowles, as chairman of the council, also asked for more emphasis in state conservation programs on solid waste disposal improvements.

"This is one of our most critical areas," he said, of the regional planning work in the urbanized districts of the state, "in relation to our goals in environmental protection."

CCC Offers Surplus Corn

The Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) has released 654,000 bushels of corn for sale in Wisconsin.

The corn may be purchased in any quantity where buyers offers equal or top minimum prices.

The corn is stored in bins in eight storage sites at Rio, Sun Prairie, Johnson Creek, New Lisbon, Darlington, Avlon, Elkhorn, and Wautoma.

Outagamie Pupils To Explore Farm

Ten years ago 600 youngsters scrambled up hills on the first Outagamie County conservation tour of Apple Hills Farm. Monday afternoon the first of 2,850 youngsters enrolled this year will swarm over the farm on North Ballard Road.

The annual tours for sixth grade pupils now involve 34 schools from throughout the county, according to Russell Luckow, Outagamie County agricultural agent.

A winding trail leads over hills and through stands of trees to eight stations where experts explain aspects of the ecology on the farm which is owned by Bruce Purdy.

Varied Lectures

Conservation practices, soils, game habitat, tree planting, pond life, woodland management, border land ecology, and farm practices are discussed for the youngsters.

Twenty experts will work together to keep the eight stations open throughout the week along the path which leads through the farm from a mile to a mile and one-half.

Most of the pupils visiting the farm will be from school districts in Appleton, Kaukauna, Kimberly and Little Chute, said Luckow. He noted, however, that pupils from Seymour, Hortonville, Black Creek and Freedom have joined in the program.

Tours Begin

The tours were started "to sort of consolidate all of the requests that we were receiving for farm tours," said Luckow.

The number of pupils which erupt out of buses each year on the farm has mushroomed until last year an estimated 3,000 attended the tour.

Both teachers and students benefit from the trip, noted Luckow.

Experts from the Farmers Home Administration, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Soil Conservation Service, University of Wisconsin extension service, Department of Natural Resources, Fox Valley Technical Institute, and National Audubon Society.

AGRI-business

Donald R. Granberg has been named general manager of Champion Operations, Koehring Farm Division, Sand Springs, Oklahoma, according to Frederick C. Kiechel, division president and general manager. Champion is a leading manufacturer of fertilizer application equipment.

Roger Ripley, Brookings, S. D., has been hired as the market manager in Minnesota and Iowa for Tri-State Breeders Cooperative.

Ripley, is a graduate of the South Dakota State University, Bookings, S. D. with a bachelors and masters degree in dairy science.

W. E. Youngdahl, De Forest, has been named vice-president of administration for American Breeders Service, Inc. (ABS).

In the post Youngdahl will be consolidating several areas of responsibility in the administrative area. In addition Youngdahl is responsible for coordinating the development of new product lines such as related cryogenic applications and the relatively new ABS Horse Breeding Program.

Miss Peggy Ann Schneider, a recent University of Wisconsin graduate, has been employed as editor of the Brown Swiss Bulletin. She will take over form Marvin L. Kruse, executive secretary-treasurer of the association, who has held the position in addition to other duties since Dec. 1968.

Pork Producers Plan Sales

Boar Brings $142 at Chilton

CHILTON — Bidders edged prices upwards here to reach a top price of $142.50 for a Hampshire boar during the Northeast Wisconsin Pork Producers Sale at the Calumet County fairgrounds.

The boar was consigned by Eugene Mertz, Hilbert, and purchased by Harley Olson, Larsen. The boar was sired by the same sire that sired the Grand Champion barrow exhibited at the Northeastern Wisconsin Junior Livestock Show.

The average price for boars in the sale was $121.25. Open gilts sold at the sale for $85.

Twenty-six head of production-tested hogs were consigned at the sale.

Litter mates of each hog at the sale had been production tested for feed efficiency, loin eye size, and rate of gain at the Northeast Wisconsin Swine Testing Station, Hortonville.

Sale prices topped levels of last year when boars averaged $102 and the overall average was $97.

The sale was the first of three being sponsored by the organization.

Outagamie Sale

The organization will start its second sale at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Outagamie County Fairgrounds, Seymour. Twenty boars and three open gilts have been consigned for the sale.

Littermates of all hogs to be offered at the sale have been production tested.

Consigners are Chester White, Donald Schnell and Son, Brillion; Duroc, Donald Green, Black Creek; Walter Kaminski and Sons, Weyauwega; Lester Schussman and Sons, Malone; and Schuster Brothers, Berlin.

Hampshires, Ernest Bruns, Hortonville; Duwayne Lohrey, Markesan; Norbert Pritzl, Cato; and Donald Riemer, Chilton. Poland China, Hamm Brothers, Waupaca; Yorkshire, Albert Bruns, Hortonville, and Hamm Brothers, Waupaca.

All hogs will be in place for examination at noon Saturday before the sale.

Wisconsin Corn Yields May Top '69 Production

MADISON — Corn yields may total 149 million bushels in Wisconsin, according to the state statistical reporting service.

Estimates were reduced 6 per cent during August due primarily to dry weather but remain 6 per cent more than last year.

Despite the August decline, it is estimated that the 1970 crop of corn will be second only to the 1968 record crop year.

Dryness helped to limit the spread of Southern leaf blight, according to H. M. Walters, head of the agency. He said blight damage appears to be minor.

Corn has matured well this season and the early planted fields now are safe from frost, according to crop reporters. By mid-September, nearly all of the corn planted for grain had dented.

Grange to Install 1971 Officers

GREENVILLE — Joint installation with Royalton Grange will be held at 8 p.m. today at South Greenville Grange. Members also will observe booster night.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Johnson, Neenah, will be guests. Mrs. Johnson will put on a skit.

The junior grange will bring pets to be shown for an animal fair. There will be displays of canned goods with fruits and vegetables. A potluck lunch will be served.

Installed will be Paul Porter, master; Isaac Hart, overseer; Mrs. Ed Wege, lecturer; Mrs. Elmer Root, chaplain; Kenneth Julius, steward; Jim Julius, assistant steward; Mrs. Henry Schaefer, secretary; Loyall Larson, treasurer; Mrs. Herbert Mossholder, ceres; Miss Lena Schultz, pomona; Mrs. Kenneth Julius, flora; Harland Schneidewend, gatekeeper and Miss Lynn Shelley, lady assistant steward. Ben Wickesberg was elected for a three-year term to the executive committee.

Paul Porter will be installing officer, John Julius, installing master; Mrs. John Schaefer and Mrs. Isaac Hart, installing marshals; Julie Porter, regalia bearer, and Jean Julius, emblem bearer.

Work Earns State Award

Outagamie Tops ASCS Units

The Outagamie County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) is "Number 1!"

The office was named best in the Wisconsin during the state ASCS convention in Madison. "They do their job a little better than all the other counties in the state, I guess," said Roland Bergman, Madison, ASCS training specialist.

Bergman praised the efficiency of the office and extent programs have been adopted in the county. No single characteristic of the office was decisive, he said.

Sixty-four offices in the state were eligible for the award. "We evaluate them according to an actual formula of performance," said Bergman.

One county is nominated each year from each of six Wisconsin ASCS districts. Jack Lammers, route 2, Shiocton, nominated Outagamie County from 15 Northeast Wisconsin counties in his district.

He praised the work in the office calling it "a well-rounded business."

Joe Rickert, Appleton, manages the office. He coordinates the work of four secretaries under the supervision of a three-man committee, elected by landowners in the county. The committeemen are Bert Weyenberg, 2501 E. Northland St., Appleton, chairman; Weldon Huss, route 2, Kaukauna, and John Reimer, route 1, Hortonville. "We're all one team effort," said Rickert.

The feed grain program provides the greatest workload for the office. Last year 1,437 producers filed intentions to participate in the program which can include diversions of corn, barley and sorghum.

Administration of Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) funds is "next in line," said Rickert.

Outagamie County also has participated in a special ACP streambank improvement project along the Wolf River. The project, started in 1965, has totaled an estimated $120,000 for work stabilizing the banks of the river, said Rickert.

MADISON — Florian Mastey, Nichols, has entered 12 head of Ayrshire cattle in the World Dairy Expo. The cattle will compete against dairy cattle from throughout the United States and Canada during the Ayrshire show which begins at noon Oct. 5 at the Dane County Fairgrounds. The exposition will start Oct. 3 and continue until Oct. 7.

Nelson Bucks Class I Plan

BY FRANCES MCKUSICK
Post-Crescent Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Class I Base plan for milk marketing should be limited to three years as stipulated in the House-passed farm bill, and not permanent, as required in the Senate measure passed late Sept. 15, 65-7, according to Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D. Wis.

In a speech on the Senate floor during debate on the dairy section of the farm bill, Nelson said, "it seems unwise to make this program permanent at a time when the marketing patterns for milk and dairy products in the United States are undergoing significant changes."

The Wisconsin senator did not, however, urge that the Senate take the time to pass an amendment limiting the Class I Base plan to three years, since, he said, this could be done effectively when the conference committee meets to smooth out other differences in the two bills.

In mentioning some of the changes which marketing patterns are undergoing in the country today, the senator pointed out that because of the rising cost of operating a dairy farm, there has been a "steady exodus of farmers from dairying over the past few years."

"In most cases, this means that new milk may be needed on short notice in those areas to keep up with population growth alone," Nelson predicted.

Increasing reports about the establishment of national standards covering the production of milk for manufactured products such as cheese, butter, and nonfat dry milk may result in present producers of manufacturing milk deciding to go out of business rather than to invest money to meet these new standards, Nelson believes.

"Therefore, the supply of milk will have to come from the Upper Midwest, (including Wisconsin)," he declared.

Because of these conditions, he said if the Class I base plan needs modification, "it will be far easier if it comes up for automatic review rather than facing the difficulty of revising a permanent statute."

He said the modifications of the original Class I base plan contained in both House and Senate bills are the "first step toward the free flow of milk to all markets."

Soviet Union Hostility Toward Nixon Grows

President's Visit to Mediterranean Area Called Saber Rattling by Kremlin Official

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

MOSCOW — The Kremlin's growing hostility toward President Nixon was starkly revealed in the foriegn ministry's immediate, unofficial reaction to news of Mr. Nixon's forthcoming trip to Mediterranean Europe.

The President's visit to Spain, Italy, and the Sixth Fleet, high Soviet officials told us, smacks of saber rattling With the Middle East a tinder box, they said, this was no time for the U. S to show the flag in a provocative way.

What this means is that the brief but nontheless real honeymoon period decreed for Mr Nixon by the Kremlin has now ended, as everyone here knew it had to end. The surprising thing is that it lasted as long as it did.

When the Nixon administration first took office in January, 1969, party leader Leonid Brezhnev and Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin made a calculated decision to lay off Mr. Nixon and give him political elbow room to follow through on his pledge to substitute negotiation for confrontation in U S. foreign policy.

Resume Customary Role

But today, despite the administration's major concessions on a Middle East settlement and Mr. Nixon's restraint in the face of Egyptian-Soviet violations of the Suez Canal standstill, Soviet policy is fast reverting to the old and customary role of hostility for the U S.

Top propagandists in the Communist party and the press, for example, claim that all of Washington's utterances and actions on Communist China have only one objective — to embarras Moscow. This theme — that a major determinant of U S foreign policy is to widen the Moscow-Peking split — is heard everywhere, with President Nixon's visit to China's friend, Rumania, last year still trotted out as a prime example.

Thus, incipient paranoia affects every aspect of Moscow's preoccupation with the big-power game of triangular politics (between Washington, Moscow, and Peking) with President Nixon, in Moscow's eyes, determined to undermine Moscow.

But hostility for the Nixon administration doesn't stop there. The President's allusions to summit conferences with the Soviets and the Nixon idea for regular contacts at the highest level are deeply resented. Party and foreign ministry operatives complain that if the President really wants summit talks he shouldn't talk about it publicly before sounding out the Kremlin privately

Also resented is Mr. Nixon's public optimism that the U. S.-Soviet talks on strategic arms limitation (SALT) will end in an agreement even though all the objective evidence supports that view But the Soviets seem bitter about front-page pictures showing champagne toasts between U. S. and Soviet negotiators

But most important of all is the hostile reaction that followed the failure of the much-coveted truck-factory deal with Henry Ford (whose visit here in May attracted unprecedented attention and the largest turnout of top official at an embassy lunch in many years).

The Soviets think that the real reason Defense Secretary Melvin Laird ruled out Ford's possible acceptance of the deal to build a huge truck factory had very little to do with the possibility of some of the trucks ending up in Hanoi Rather, the Soviets see a more Machiavellian motive — that denial of U. S. technology will keep the Soviet Union in a state of perpetual economic underdevelopment.

Preposterous as that suspicion may be, it is widely held and it explains the extraordinary effort Moscow is now making to get help from West Germany and other capitalistic countries to close the technological gap in non-military production.

The collapse of the truck deal with Ford (which is now being negotiated with a syndicate of West Europeans headed by Germany's Mercedes) marked the beginning of the end of a most unlikely period of contemporary Soviet history — the Nixon honeymoon. Immediately ahead is a tougher, more dangerous period with no possibility of Soviet help in the Vietnam war and no prospect of Soviet trimming in the Middle East.

Co-op Cites Status of Legislation

Work in dairy legislation was outlined by Robert Beck, Lodi, field services director for Pure Milk Products Cooperative (PMPC), Fond du Lac, during a meeting of the organization's Fox Valley Local in Appleton.

"We've had a successful year with legislative work," noted Beck.

The cooperative has urged Clifford Hardin, secretary of agriculture, to increase the support price of milk from 75 per cent of parity to 90 per cent, he said.

Legislation has been okayed to make a bill permanent which enables youngsters in schools to buy milk at reduced rates, he noted. Pesticide indemnity payments also have been approved for farmers whose herds are affected by pesticides.

Beck noted the cooperative was among those which sought to limit imports of dairy products. The organization has proposed all imports be based on the amount of milk used in manufacture, he said, instead of regulations for individual products.

Arnold J. Coonen, route 4, Kaukauna, was named president of the local. Other officers and directors named were Alex Hoelzel, route 4, Appleton, vice president; Cletus Van Treeck, route 4, Kaukauna, secretary-treasurer; and directors Gordon Vande Hey, route 2, Menasha, and Harold A. Miller, route 1, Neenah.

Miller was named a delegate to the annual PMPC meeting in Fond du Lac and Gordon Van De Hey, route 2, Menasha, was elected to the organization's advisory board.

Officers of the ladies auxiliary of the organization were Mrs. Arnold Coonen, route 4, Kaukauna, Mrs. Cletus Van Treeck, route 4, Kaukauna, and Mrs. John Van Treeck, route 4, Kaukauna.

Bonduel Guernsey To Compete in Expo

Illinois Corn Yields Dip as Blight Strikes

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The condition of Illinois corn has declined for the sixth week in a row with 90 per cent of the crop reported infested with southern corn leaf blight.

Posing a major problem for the 5 per cent of Illinois farmers who have begun harvesting corn is stalk breakage. The breakage is due largely to the blight.

Illinois Crop Reporting Service's latest report Friday said harvested corn is bringing comments of kernel mold, chaffy corn and below normal test weights.

About 70 per cent of the corn is reported mature, about a week ahead of a year ago. Harvesting is running 10 days ahead of the past two years.

Illinois Agriculture Director John W. Lewis, last week held to his estimate that the state's corn crop would be reduced from original estimates by 25 per cent due to the blight.

Lewis disagreed with federal statistics which forecast a crop of 871 million bushels, which is 9 per cent below the 1969 level.

He said federal estimates did not consider the condition of the corn, low test weights and corn stalk damage, which he said means leaving a lot of corn in the fields.

He said the federal estimate did not give a "true picture," and lacked "practical judgement."

Analysis of Forage Offers Guide for Dairy Rations

Post-Crescent Correspondence

MARSHFIELD — Forage analysis enables farmers to feed "for top profit," according to W. Terry Howard, University of Wisconsin extension dairyman.

Study of protein content can guide proper feeding, explained Howard, to farmers visiting the UW experimental farm here during Dairy Day.

"Water is the first thing of importance," he said. When forage is high in moisture, excess amounts must be fed to insure that cattle get proper nutrition. Tests also can analyze minerals in the feed and protein content.

Samples of hay or silage must be taken with care if study of feed is to be useful. "The thing to do is get a bale corer," said Howard.

A cross-section sample of hay must be used to obtain accurate tests. "Unless you sample with a core sampler it is very difficult." Howard advised farmers to take several samples of silage when filling silos to obtain proper test results.

Samples should be frozen to prevent spoilage or fermentation before testing.

Laboratory Test

Glass tubes surrounded Harold Larsen, UW dairy scientist, as he explained in the laboratory how analysis is conducted. After dry forage is pulverized, one-gram samples are treated with catalysts and sulfuric acid and heated.

Then sodium hydroxide are sodium sulphate, and zinc catalysts are added and 200 millileters of the solution is distilled.

"It has to be precise," stressed Larsen. He said that a 1 per cent error at the laboratory could cause a farmer to add $500 worth of unneeded supplements to feed.

Little Error

To insure accuracy, samples are weighed to the ten-thousandth of a gram, noted Larsen. "Determining crude protein is not a simple thing."

After distillation, a mathematical formula is used to find moisture content of the feed and crude protein is determined.

The laboratory at the experimental farm is able to complete 12 samples during a day, said Larsen.

Blight Not Critical in Winnebago Survey

BY DONALD TRIPP

Winnebago County Farm Management Agent

OSHKOSH — A recent survey of 41 Winnebago County corn fields showed seven fields with no evidence of blight, and 34 which were affected by blight. Most of the fields surveyed were affected to only a minor degree. Four of the fields were considered to be relatively serious.

The seriously damaged fields were in towns of Clayton, Rushford, Winchester and Wolf River. The survey indicates the county has been spared a great deal of loss from either Yellow Leaf Blight or Eyespot.

Southern leaf blight, which has been of recent concern to corn growers is not of serious concern and not expected to cause drastic economic loss in the county.

Silo gas can pose a danger. This situation is present during silo filling time. There probably will be high levels of silo gas resulting from nitrate accumulations in the ground. Silo gas is deadly to humans and livestock, and should be used with extreme care during and after silo filling time. Silo gas has a yellowish-brown color and odor similar to laundry bleach.

Rural Development Moves Into Focus

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration is gradually taking its turn at trying to bring order and direction to rural decelopment, one of the nation's most persistent and frustrating problems.

There are subtle signs, according to some authorities, that the country is ready for a major effort. The migration of people to cities has slowed to a trickle from the floods of the 1950s and early '60s. Yet the trend continues, primarily because poverty-level farmers and many other rural residents do not have income opportunities locally.

Nixon Program

President Nixon's Task Froce on Rural Development put it this way: "If this is to be a happy and healthy nation in the years ahead, our growing industry and our increasing population must spread out instead of continuing to pile people and industrial plants into compacted urban areas."

The White House is expected to make proposals soon for coping with the problems. There have been signals for months that rural development has been one of the chief concerns of Secretary of Agriculture Clifford M. Hardin and other administration farm officials.

These have taken firmer shape in recent weeks with reports that the Department of Agriculture is reorganizing to help with rural development goals sought by the White House.

The Extension Service—the educational network geared to land-grant universities—will play a vital part. One important move was the appointment on Sept. 4 of Dr. John Bottum of Ohio State University as assistant administrator for rural development.

Wisconsin Chancellor

Henry L. Ahlgren, chancellor for extension at the University of Wisconsin, has been named to a top-level job for coordinating rural development programs.

The task force report issued last March put a good deal of emphasis on "local initiative" with the federal government helping provide incentives and tools for private initiative. "Rural development is not," the task force said, "a new agency of government."

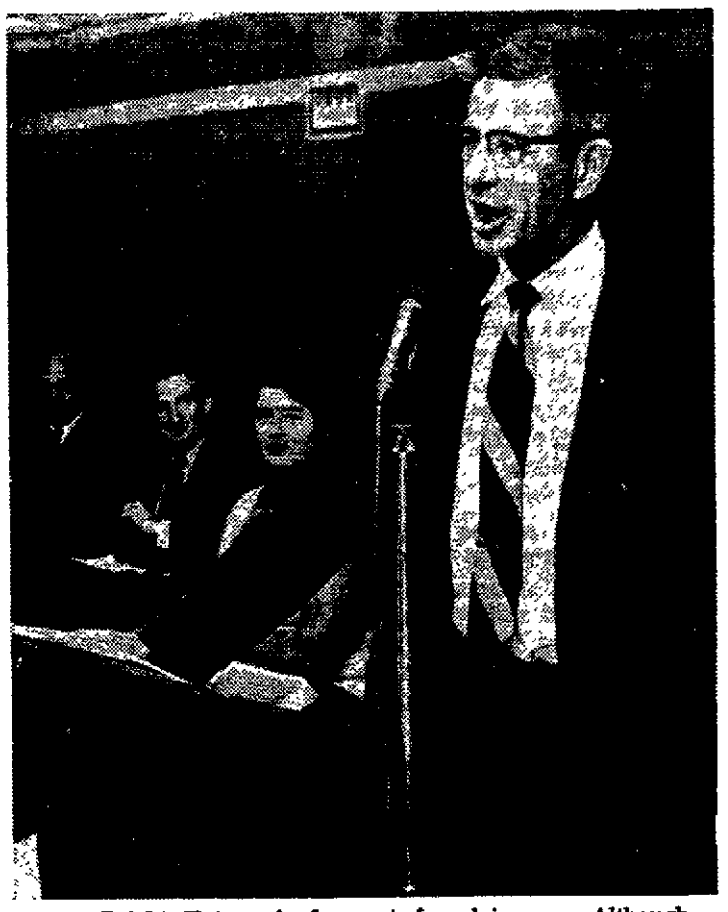
Federal Push

Yet the federal government's role is expected to be important. Any expanded loan programs, tax incentives or other inducements for industry relocation and development of service is bound to require congressional action.

Meantime, Congress itself may be taking a more concentrated look at rural development. A part of the new omnibus farm bill drafted by the Senate Agriculture Committee not only defines the problem but calls for progress reports by agencies beginning next Dec. 1.

The farm bill provision on rural development, written by Sens. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., is aimed at putting Congress, the administration and its successors on record on behalf of rural America.

"The Congress is, therefore," the bill says, "committed to a sound balance between rural and urban America. The Congress considers this balance so essential to the peace, prosperity and welfare of all our citizens that the highest priority must be given to the revitalization and development of rural areas."



A Bright Future is forecast for dairymen. Although population boosts may cause problems, farming should improve says Prof. James Crowley, University of Wisconsin extension dairy specialist, at the annual meeting of the Outagamie County Dairy Herd Improvement Association. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Bloody 9-Day War In Jordan Is Over

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan and Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasir Arafat agreed today to end the bloody nine-day civil war in Jordan and Sudanese officers were assigned to help police the truce.

President Jaafar el Numairi of Sudan, who led the negotiations to end the fighting, announced over Amman radio that a team of Sudanese officers was going to Irbid to "arrange for the return of normal life." Irbid, 50 miles north of Amman, has been the scene of heavy fighting.

Hostages Freed

The agreement by Hussein, Arafat and Numairi was announced on Amman radio. Only Wednesday, Arafat, head of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, had vowed to keep on fighting.

In another development, Habis Majali, Jordan's military governor, reported that 15 of 54 hijacked airline passengers held hostage by the guerrillas had been freed by Jordan's army. They were eight Britons, five Swiss and two West Germans. All but one of the 39 hostages still held are believed to be Americans.

Numairi read this message from Arafat over Amman radio: Masses of our great people, our brave revolutionaries—In order to avoid more innocent bloodshed and so that the citizens may be able to take care of their wounded and buy necessary foodstuffs, in my capacity of supreme commander of the Palestinian revolutionary forces . . . I agree to the ceasefire and order all the forces of the Palestinian revolution to stop firing at once. We are committed to this decision as long as the other side does the same."

Hussein's orders to his armed forces said: "In compliance with my cease-fire orders and after leaders of the commando movement have emphasized their readiness to completely observe the cease-fire, I repeat my order to the Jordanian armed forces to immediately and totally cease firing. . .

"We have accepted the agreement proposed by some of the guerrilla leaders to end the current crisis after it was approved by the delegation of Arab Kings and presidents."

This was a reference to Numairi's peace mission.

The agreement followed reports on Cairo Radio that Numairi met with Arafat early today. On Wednesday Arafat had spurned a cease-fire reached between Hussein and two captured guerrilla leaders.

Field Marshal Majali said the freed airline passengers "are now in army hands preparatory to their delivery to their home countries."

He did not say how they were freed from the guerrillas.

Originally, there were some 400 hostages, from three planes hijacked to the Jordanian desert Sept. 6 and 9. Most of the hostages were released earlier. The planes were blown up.

The guerrillas have demanded the release of Palestinian commandos jailed in Britain, West Germany, Switzerland and Israel as ransom for the hostages.

Issue Orders

Majali and Hussein both issued orders over Amman Radio for their troops to abide by the cease-fire after reports of more fighting around Irbid in northern Jordan.

Arafat said the guerrillas would abide by the cease-fire as long as the army did the same. Arafat has not agreed to any of the previous cease-fires an-

3 Suspects Are Set Free By Authorities

Young Musicians Found Not to be Madison Bombers

HILLSBORO, Tex. (AP) — Three young men, heading to their new home in Killeen, got a lengthy detour to the Hillsboro jail Thursday before being cleared in a bombing that killed one person and injured three others at the University of Wisconsin.

Authorities held the three hippie-styie musicians for about six hours, then released them after agreeing that wanted posters picturing four youths sought for the bombing last month did not match any of them.

County, state and federal officials were involved, but authorities later said there was some confusion about who ordered their arrest.

Leaving the confusion behind, Monty Fox, 17, of Santa Cruz, Calif.; John Long, 17, of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Ron Olsen, 20, of Milwaukee, Wis., wondered if they made a wise choice in their new home.

"We all officially moved to Texas three weeks ago," said Olsen, was fined $20 for not having a driver's license.

Did he and his companions have any idea why they were stopped?

"Well, John was supposed to look identical to one of the bombers," Fox said. "And the car was supposed to be identical to the getaway car used by the bombers."

"But we didn't know why they were holding us until about three hours later," Olsen said. "They finally just asked us if we knew any of the people in the pictures of the accused bombers. Then they finally let us go."

They left town in a beat-up 1953 car for Killeen, where they said they planned to find jobs.

Cambodians Press on To Split Enemy Force

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Cambodian troops attempting to cut in two a powerful enemy force 47 miles north of Phnom Penh moved to within about a mile of a link-up early today, reliable sources said.

But North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops continued to pour in mortar fire on the newly reinforced government troops, who are attempting to smash an enemy strong point that has stalled Cambodia's first major action of the war for nearly two weeks.

Reports from the field said the government now has more than two divisions of infantry in the battle zone at the village of Taing Kuk. Four fresh battalions reportedly arrived Thursday after the enemy beat back an attempt Wednesday to capture the town.

Cambodian officers said they were certain of victory now that they have a force six times or so larger than the enemy force believed to be in the area. However, government troops were still moving gingerly, mindful of serious casualties to several government battalions in the fighting so far.

One Cambodian element fought its way into the western outskirts of the village Thursday, the Cambodian command reported, and it was toward this force that the eastern element was reported moving.

But the distance still separating them was said to include several hundred enemy troops of the regimental-sized force believed somewhere in the area.

Earlier Thursday, Cambodian troops drove a wedge into the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong force but were halted by well-dug-in enemy positions.

New Drug Bill Passed by House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed a broad narcotics control bill giving agents and judges more power while reducing the penalty for possessing a drug for personal use.

The bill eliminates all mandatory minimum sentences for controlled drugs and brings in rehabilitation and research features under a $403 million, three-year program.

A 340-6 vote Thursday sent the measure to the Senate which last January passed a more limited version.

No-Knock Backed

In some instances the bill exceeds Nixon administration proposals in the drug portion of its anticrime package.

However, the no-knock authority for narcotics agents and the new judicial authority both had administration backing.

The no-knock section, which allows agents under some circumstances to enter a home unannounced, was in the Senate bill. Similar language giving judges power to boost penalties after conviction in certain cases is included in separate pending crime bills.

The House bill also includes a spending ceiling of $6 million in each of the three years to hire an additional 300 narcotics agents. The administration hadn't sought it nor was it in the Senate bill.

The package covers barbiturates, amphetamines, hallucinogens, tranquilizers and marijuana and includes a section to control imports and exports of such hard narcotics as heroin.

It would reduce from a felony to a misdemeanor illegal possession of controlled drugs by an individual for his own use. Otherwise, possesion would remain a felony.

Term Mandatory

A sentence of 10 years to life would be mandatory for organized pushers.

But, with solid Republican backing, Rep. Richard H. Poff, R-Va., added authority for the judge to levy sentences up to 25 years for special dangerous offenders even though lower terms were imposed after conviction. His amendment was approved on a 147-61 nonrecord vote.

Lightning Started Fire in Which 5 Persons Died

COLUMBUS, Wis. (AP) — The state fire marshal's office said today it had determined that lighting caused the fire that swept through a rural Dodge County home near midnight Wednesday, claiming five lives.

Frank Roberts, assistant fire marshal, said his investigation showed a passing motorist saw lightning strike the house during a thunderstorm.

He added the motorist drove in the yard, blew the horn on his car, then pounded on the door but was unable to arouse occupants.

The motorist, Roberts said, drove to Columbus to summon help. Roberts said the man was unable to break into the house because of his physical condition. He underwent open heart surgery a year ago.

Students to Plea For Hostages

MADISON (AP)—The Wisconsin Student Association is making a plea for the immediate release of a University of Wisconsin student among Mideast airplane hijack hostages.

The association said today it has a petition containing 600 signatures to be sent to Jordanian authorities.

The petition asks the release of Mark Shain, 20, a UW junior from Shorewood, and more than 50 other passengers being held captive by Palestinian guerrillas.

Four Radicals Sought

Holdup, Blast Linked

BOSTON (AP) — Police have linked the bombing and looting of a Newburyport National Guard armory last Sunday with one of four young persons sought in the holdup slaying of a Boston policeman.

Officers said supplies and ammunition stolen from the armory were found Thursday night in the Back Bay apartment of Katherine A. Power, 21, of Denver, Colo., sought with three others in the bank holdup-slaying.

Police Commissioner Edmund L. McNamara said the materials showed a "positive link" between Wednesday's slaying and "radical, revolutionary campus groups."

Officers with a search warrant seized rifles, ammunition, a military field telephone and other military gear in the apartment.

Other Evidence

They said they also found letters and other evidence in the two-room basement apartment of Miss Power, a Brandeis University senior, indicating it may also have been used by Susan Saxe, 20, of Albany, N.Y., a Brandeis graduate last June.

A similar raid at another Back Bay apartment yielded .45 caliber ammunition—the same type that killed the policeman—and letters linking it to a man already in custody.

All were charged with murder in the $26,000 holdup of the Brighton district branch of State Street Bank and Trust Co. in which a policeman was shot and wounded fatally.

The Newburyport armory, headquarters for Co. A, 101st Engineers, was looted and set afire last Sunday.

Suspects Named

Already under arrest in the bank robbery case was Robert Valeri, 21, of Somerset, Mass., a student at Northeastern University in Boston and an ex-convict.

The warrants, charging murder and armed robbery, named Miss Power, Miss Saxe, and two ex-convicts, Stanley R. Bond, 25, now enrolled at Brandeis, and William M. Gilday, 41, a student at Northeastern.

Police said they believed the girls and Bond flew to Los Angeles Thursday morning.

The $26,000 holdup occurred at the Brighton district branch of the State Street Bank and Trust Co. Wednesday morning.

In Albany, Eliot Saxe, Susan's father, said he believed his daughter was mistakenly identified. He said she lost her driver's license two months ago and someone must have found it.

Saxe said his daughter went to Oregon Sept. 1 and planned to work there a year.

"Out of Contact

In Denver, Mrs. Winfield S. Power, Kathy's mother, said the girl had been "out of contact with the family for a long time.' She declined further comment.

Sources on the Brandeis campus said Miss Power was active in the women's liberation movement and last month was one of five Brandeis students who sought in federal court to block the closing of the National Student Strike Information Center on the campus. Their effort failed.

The slain policeman was Patrolman Walter A. Schroeder, 42, father of nine, who held the department's highest honor, the Walter Scott Medal of Valor. He won it for capturing three men who robbed the same bank in 1968. His oldest child is 16.

A few hours after Schroeder died at St. Elizabeth's Hospital Thursday, detectives obtained warrants charging the two girls and two men with murder and armed robbery. They did not disclose the source of their information.

Legal Lottery Offers $1 Million

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state Tax Department found the million-dollar summer lottery such a "runaway success" that it has decided to hold another this year.

Acting Tax Commissioner Norman Gallman announced Thursday that another batch of $3 tickets would be sold between Oct. 1 and Dec. 31 with the top prize again $1 million.

The department initiated the million-dollar lottery last June as an added means of raising money for education.

Sales which ended Sept. 15 "far exceeded our most optimistic expectations," Gallman said. He predicted they would top $10 million although exact figures were not available.

In the state's regular monthly lottery, with $1 tickets and top prize of $100,000, sales have averaged between $3 million and $4 million. Its proceeds also go for education.

Drawings for the summer special will be conducted Oct. 8 in New York City.

Shoving Match at Waupaca

Deer Hunters Rambunctious

The adrenaline flowed a little prematurely among a group of Waupaca County deer hunters waiting Thursday morning for party tags.

The weary and rain-soaked hunters — some had waited 18 hours — vented their anger in a free-for-all, after conservation wardens decided not to honor a priority list the hunters had devised for themselves.

A similar gathering formed in front of the Outagamie County Courthouse in Appleton for the annual issuance of party tags, which allow a party of hunters to shoot a doe in buck territory. Wardens feared trouble might develop as the number of permits dwindled, but nothing happened.

The trouble stemmed from the fact that the state decided this year to issue fewer than one-third of the number of party permits issued last year. It took the action in response to hunters' claims that there weren't enough deer to go around last year. The result was an oversupply of hunters Thursday and an undersupply of permits.

The lineup of Waupaca hunters at the armory grew from the first arrivals at 7 p.m. Wednesday to upwards of 300 by midmorning. Those in line started their own numbering system, signing their names and taking consecutive numbers.

A camaraderie developed as hunters exchanged tidbits of information about themselves, their interests and hunting exploits. But this was to disappear when they were told two minutes before the doors were to open at 1 p.m., that "no numbers list" would be honored. The mood changed and hunters began jostling and elbowing, as late-arrivers sought to get near the three-door armory.

Muscle and bravado reigned, as the good guys — those who didn't force their way to the front — found themselves left out. Several wardens and city policemen manned the entrance, alternating doors as the pressure, shouting and jeering from the outside grew louder.

Some who waited asked the police for "law and order," while others retreated to a safe distance from the roughhousing.

The wardens took considerable verbal abuse for their handling of the sales.

"Did you ever see such a hell of a mess?" declared one hunter. "What are those wardens thinking about? If they can't run this show right, why don't they give up?"

Took Day Off

"I took a day off from my job and have been standing in that line since 6 this morning. I had a No. 31 in my hand and where do I wind up? About No. 50 and with my jacket half torn off my back," stormed one incensed Milwaukee man "Believe me, somebody is going to hear about this."

"If the wardens and police had been outside the armory maintaining the lines we formed and letting us pass through, and kept those roaring, shouting intruders out of there, this wouldn't have happened," said another.

"Give us our money back, you dummies!" shouted a 265-pounder. "These guys are nothing but a bunch of revenuers; they aren't conservation people. They've turned us into animals; and I didn't come here to fight."

For the most part the women who stood watch held their places in line, but they shared in the fray with equal vigor.

Applauded, Booed

At 3 p.m., Warden Rex Oatman manned the loudspeaker of a county police car, cruised in front of the armory and announced, "If the brawling doesn't stop, I'll close the line." He was applauded and booed.

The 4:30 p.m. closing time was extended to 4:50 and all the 500 allotted permits were sold. Forty disappointed people stood in line and another estimated 100 to 150 left equally disappointed.

Security Tightened For Agnew Visit

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, one of the top money-makers for the Republicans on the year's campaign circuit, was the chief attraction today at a $150-a-plate dinner at the Milwaukee Arena.

Police said some of the tightest security precautions in the city's history were being taken to assure that Agnew's televised speech wouldn't be interrupted by demonstrators.

Prior to the dinner, Agnew planned a private meeting with party backers who have contributed $400 or more to the campaign coffers. At least 2,000 diners were expected at the Arena, local Republicans said.

Requests for demonstration peace during Agnew's evening visit in Wisconsin have been made by two of the state's top Democrats. Sen. William Proxmire and gubernatorial candidate Patrick J. Lucey.

Jack Olson, the Republican nominee for governor, and John Erickson, GOP nominee for senator were to accompany Agnew on his flight from Washington to Milwaukee.

Olson's staff said the lieutenant governor would be in Washington today, joining in White House talks about revenue-sharing bills in Congress.

Revenue Plans

He has said some of the revenue plans could mean $120 million for Wisconsin by 1975.

"Some people are just too pessimistic about chances for passage," Olson said in a statement.

Lucey, in a campaign speech in Racine, continued his complaints against what he calls Wisconsin's sluggishness in helping cities with the increased costs of law enforcement.

"Law enforcement," Lucey said "cannot be strengthened by vague political promises of 'law and order.' What are needed are hard-headed programs to improve the capability of police forces."

"Wisconsin is last in the nation in the percentage of the state budget devoted to direct police programs," he said.

Drug Council Looks for Total Involvement

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The newly formed Drug Council, Inc., for Outagamie County "isn't a fly-by-night group," says Mrs. David Patterson, an Appleton housewife who is a co-founder and vice president.

In fact, she says "it's expanding with every month" and has some lofty goals which she believes can be reached under a three-pronged program of education, law enforcement and treatment, rehabilitation and counseling.

"The real objective of the council is to bring about a total involvement of the community in the problem of drug abuse," she says. "It's everybody's problem, and the council will serve where the need arises."

She sees the council, which has grown from about 25 members at its inception last July to about 35, as a base for anyone interested or involved in drug abuse activities. It provides the centralized and solid base to bring together those who have worked independently on drug abuse problems or who now feel a need exists.

One of the council's initial jobs will be to create an awareness for need, and Mrs. Patterson thinks they have an ace-in-the-hole. Art Linkletter, television personality, has consented to speak at Huntley Elementary School in January, (this may be televised) and at Appleton High School-East in the evening for the public.

She sees his appearance as a "catalyst" toward a large and total community approach on controlling the drug abuse problems.

"He should be the high point of a whole community effort," Mrs. Patterson says.

The council has a sound base of membership — housewives, doctors, educators, civic groups' representatives who have been interested in the drug problem for a long time. They now are organized and hope the council will end the brush-fire approach to drug abuse fighting.

David L. Patterson, of the Huntley PTA, is chairman, and his wife and Leo Bronkalla, superintendent of the Little Chute public school system, are vice chairmen. Most of the members are from Appleton.

Mrs. Patterson says the council feels it must work in all three of its chosen areas of concern. "You can't have one without the other and be effective," she says.

In education, the council will encourage total community, as well as in-school, education on the drug problem. This will include reaching lower school-aged youngsters and providing "accurate information about drugs and their effects."

"We're not going to ramrod anything," she adds, but speakers and other presentations will be scheduled. She predicts the scope of the problem in schools and ways to control it will be found by June.

The second area will be law enforcement, an essential area of concern since drug abuse is against the law, she says. The council will seek to enhance understanding of enforcement of drug laws and promote programs, as it did the three-man narcotics squad for the county.

Meet With County

Council members met with county officials and enforcement prsonnel to build a strong case supporting the special squad, which was authorized by the County Board last summer.

"Their cooperation helped significantly in getting the drug squad going," says County district attorney, "but of even more significance, I'm very pleased to see the community as a whole — in the form of this council — take a good look at drug abuse needs and seek a concrete plan to do something about it."

This active support for the squad was on a list Mrs. Patterson produced during the interview. She says the list includes programs and activities, the date they are to be executed (or have been executed) and who will execute them.

They range from talks to the Breakfast Optimist Club on drug abuse and the council, to assisting County Judge Nick F. Schaefer in setting up a drug school, to attending a drug seminar at Winnebago State Hospital. This list reflects requests from persons who are interested or involved in the problem, she says.

The third concern area is with the user and his treatment, rehabilitation and counseling. The council won't counsel but will direct those needing it to the right places, Mrs. Patterson says.

She says that council members are aware of users, their problems and have been contacted by individuals with addictions.

The council now exists on donations from individuals, civic groups and Huntley school, she says, with most contributions coming from Little Chute. But she hopes support will increase and, says Grafton Ray, law enforcement planner with the East Central Region, is investigating possible federal aid programs.

"Linkletter Plan"

Mrs. Patterson says the council is convinced of the need to attack the drug abuse program on a wide plane. The group is preparing and will publish a brochure called the Appleton-Linkletter Plan, which she describes as a "blueprint for community action" against the drug abuse problem.

Linkletter has agreed to this arrangement and the plan will be ready for distribution at his appearance.

Council members also have been asked to help form a similar group in Escanaba, Mich., and have been asked for information about their activities from groups throughout Wisconsin, she says.

Hopeful Hunters started lining up at the Waupaca Armory Wednesday in hopes of getting one of the 500 permits that went on sale Thursday. Some used the time in taking naps while others sent runners to nearby drive-inns for snacks.

DNR to be Asked to Plan Mosquito Hill

Woehler Rejects Students as Planners

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) will be asked to provide guidance for the planning of development of Mosquito Hill and the planned addition to Plamann Park.

The action by the Parks Committee came on the recommendation of County Administrator Alvin O. Woehler Thursday night after he less than cooly rejected a Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission proposal to use graduate students in the University of Wisconsin Landscape Architecture Department.

Charles Hervey, planning commission director, made the proposal for use of graduate students after the Parks Committee balked at the commission's estimated $20,000 planning and engineering costs for development of the two parks.

After the Parks Committee had received the estimates, it recommended that the county investigate hiring a full-time county planner rather than pay outside planners.

Talk to DNR

Woehler said that before the committee did anything it should talk to the DNR. He said that in previous conversations with the DNR, they had expressed a willingness to assist the county in determining the direction to take. Supv. Nick Karras, Appleton, committee chairman, agreed that this was the impression he also had received from the state agency.

Hervey contended that hiring a county planner would not solve park planning needs. "The average planner is not qualified to do park planning," Hervey said.

He added that to draw detailed engineering plans for a park such as Mosquito Hill would take one man about six months.

This, Hervey said, is response to a committee question, was beyond the scope of responsibility of the regional planning commission.

Defer Planning

He also suggested deferring planning on one park for a year to reduce planning costs. The costs would be further reduced, he contended, by using the University of Wisconsin students.

Woehler also asked for a meeting with Hervey Monday to "iron out" billing procedures used by the planning commission.

The county administrator said he had received a bill from Northeastern for its services on the ad hoc study committee on solid waste disposal and wanted to know why.

Hervey said no bill had been sent for service with that committee and than any bills dealing with solid waste disposal stemmed from a solid waste disposal study started a year ago by the commission.

Woehler said that there were other bills which were not identified as to what budget they were from and wanted to discuss them with Hervey.

New London Course

30 Adults Enroll For Driver Training

NEW LONDON — About 30 adults have enrolled to learn to drive or review their driving talents in the school district's new driver simulator.

The course will have 12 hours of simulation experience and education classes. During this time the student will simulate driving in 14 various situations. These will include parallel parking, proper driving habits, starting the auto and other skills.

The instruction is designed to help pass the written examination for a temporary license.

After using the simulator the students will get two hours of behind the wheel driving in one of the drivers education autos. This will give each person the opportunity to actually work behind the wheels. Driving times will be in the late afternoon and early evening for the convenience of the student.

The students also will get in observation time, students riding while another drives.

Student having particular problems also will have the opportunity to get individual help with their particular situation.

Purpose of the program is two-fold. First is to make each student a good and careful driver, and second, to assist the student obtain a driver's license.

It was noted that the student should drive as often as possible, under legal situations, to become comfortable, responsible, and reactive while driving.

Students will be notified when the course will start. It is expected to begin Monday however, the instructors are waiting for some films to come.

There are still some openings for students in the course. Interested adults can register for the classes by calling the Senior High School. There is no fee for the course.

Jury's Verdict Overturned

Judge's Ruling Threatens Arrests by County Deputies

An Outagamie County judge has handed down a ruling which could question every arrest made in the county in the recent years by sheriff's deputies and county policemen.

County Judge Urban P. Van Susteren, after reviewing touchy legalities in the cases of three Seymour men found guilty of five misdemeanor charges a week ago, set aside the jury's findings and Thursday dismissed counts against Orville Gagnow, 43, his son, Larry, 23, and the owner of the Pine Castle Ballroom in rural Seymour, Francis Coonen.

Dist. Atty. James R. Long said he would immediately appeal the decision to the Circuit Court, on the ground that it is contrary to a recent State Supreme Court ruling involving a Brown County case.

The Supreme Court ruled in June that a trial judge need not be convinced that a jury was correct or agree with their findings for their verdicts to stand.

Status at Issue

At issue was the status of the arresting officer, William Knutson, who, while acting in the capacity of a county sheriff's deputy the night of July 25 at the Pine Castle, charged the three after a fracas started during a wedding reception for Larry.

The defense attorney argued that according to a rarely consulted Wisconsin statute, Knutson, in order to be acting as a duly authorized police officer, would have had to file his deputy's oath with the county clerk's office.

Testimony during trial by County Clerk Arthur Hoolihan, who checked records, revealed that Knutson did not do this. Instead, it was learned that his oath is on record in the clerk of courts office.

Van Susteren, upon establishing that the statute applies in this case, complied with defense motions, which argued that the charges "have to fall" if Knutson was not qualified as a police officer. In line with that, he dropped a charge of obstructing an officer against Orville and a charge of resisting arrest against Larry.

Questions Statute

A disorderly conduct count against Larry would have remained, the judge said, had it been proved that his actions on the 25th led the crowd to become boisterous or otherwise disorderly, in spite of the presence of police.

Long, terming the questionable nature of the statute a quandary, said "I don't believe the statute requires" filing an oath of deputy with the County Clerk.

Knutson, who was in uniform that night, "gave the appearance of a police officer and all the guests had no doubt that he was," Long charged. He further held that all the deputies presently serving the sheriff's department also have failed to file their oaths with the county clerk's office. The violation carries a maximum fine of $100.

Long implied that the little-challenged section was seemingly not to be taken literally, or binding, but subject to interpretation.

"I wouldn't send a dog to the dog pound on such flimsy evidence," Van Susteren proclaimed, referring to the two counts charging Francis Coonen with selling beer to minors. "It would have taken me two minutes to find him innocent of that," the judge declared.

Trial Testimony

Two 17-year-old Green Bay youths testified during trial that they each bought a bottle of beer in the teen section of the Pine Castle that night from a man later identified as one of Coonen's bartenders. The bartender denied it on the stand.

In the parking lot later, the pair was questioned by Knutson, in the presence of an 18-year-old youth.

"I find it hard to believe that Coonen and his bartenders would willingly serve beer to minors," Van Susteren said, citing the clean record of each. He implied that the boy, 18, could have purchased the beer for his younger companions during a rush at the bar, and that would give the 17-year-olds an "excuse for lying" to protect him.

The fracas was reportedly sparked off in connection with KGnutson's questioning of the youths, acquaintances of Larry Gognow, shortly after Gagnow stepped in to the discussion to intercede for them, as host of his wedding party.

Save Winnebago Unit Urges DNR Firings During Neenah Parley

NEENAH— The Lake Winnebago mess was not left up to the imagination of the 80 people who showed up despite the rain Wednesday night at Lakeview School to see color slides of pollution in the lake.

The slides were shown by Ed J. Casper, president of Save Winnebago, Inc., a non-profit group of business men and local politicians who live mostly in Calumet County that is pledged to clean up the lake by forcing the state to use existing laws against the 44 major polluters of Winnebago.

Casper said the group has a suit asking for the dismissal of three department of natural resources biggies, L. P. Voigt, secretary; John A. Beale, deputy secretary; and John M. Potter, chairman of the DNR board.

"If the people of Wisconsin had a chance to elect Potter, they'd never put him in office," Casper said. He raked the appointee system as the major obstacle to proper enforcement of anti-pollution laws.

Ancient abatement orders against the two worst polluters, the cities of Oshkosh and Fond du Lac, were two of many examples of non - enforcement Casper gave. Fond du Lac was supposed to be cleaned up 23 years ago.

Non-enforcement

Casper said non-enforcement was in great part due to appointed officials and elected politicians making promises, making noise in the media and then sitting quiet. "Two or four years later they're gone, and the whole show goes around again."

The slides, many of them from the air, went around Winnebago's shores starting at Fond du Lac and going north on the east side. Casper said they were taken this summer.

In Fond du Lac, the camera lingered around the inadequate sewage plant and the ponding caused when northwest winds pushed sewage-lade water into a bog-like area to fester until another wind "freshened" the mix.

St. Mary's Academy, Galloway West plant, and the Necedah School for Girls were photographically caught polluting the lake. From the air, boats left two distinct wakes, one in the water and another in scum floating in the surface of the lake.

At High Cliff State Park, the water showed a bright, pea green on July 20. There were few swimmers. Casper mentioned the money spent to build the recreation area and bemoaned its relative uselessness.

A pile of cans, and garbage on lake shore property owned by North Shore Country Club showed in photos. "They've been dumping there for years," Casper said and talked about rain leeching decaying garbage into the lake and the rats who got to it before the rain.

Neenah-Menasha's infamous sewage plant outfall pipes left three lines of pure pollution that showed clearly from the air. They pump enough raw sewage to completely refill Little Lake Butte des Morts every 16 months. A photo showed Appleton's water plant intake section of the Fox River, and Casper mentioned how alive the water was with things harmful to man.

His organization cares about the Fox, but figures it is up to people who live on it to clean it up. "We'll take care of Lake Winnebago; we're not going to get bogged down in the Fox."

The camera slid down the west side of the lake, snapping pancakes of algae, scum-covered beaches, bays clogged with heavy, brown water and Oshkosh's inadequate sewage plant, the single worst polluter of the lake.

South of Oshkosh, cottages, motels and restaurants with useless septic systems dotted the lake shore. Piers stuck out into water that nobody swimmed in.

Back in Fond du Lac, Casper had a picture of a Huck-Finn lad fishing in the Fond du Lac River. The water was repulsively colored and opaque with crud. The kid was grinning.

Club Files Judgment

Country Club Files Against Waupaca For Fees, Petition

WAUPACA — The Waupaca Country Club has filed judgment against the City of Waupaca in the amount of $122.40 to cover the cost of attorney fee and the filing of its petition against the city's $107,850 total assessment for tax purposes in 1969.

On Aug. 28, Judge William E. Crane, circuit judge of the 3rd Judicial Circuit Court, Oshkosh, set aside the assessment.

To date the city has not determined its next step. It can appeal Judge Crane's decision, can call for a reassessment of the city's real estate and from that determine the new assessment value of the country club, or the city assessor can reassess the property.

The country club's property was assessed for 1970 at the same rate, $107,850 for real estate. Last year this resulted in a tax levy of $8,320.18 on Parcel B (the land in question).

Questions which are still unanswered: Will the city have to refund this money in the light of Judge Crane's decision, pay interest for the time the money has been held, or keep it (without cost to the city) until the city choses its next step?

Major Changes in Diet

Protein Foods of Future Are Soybeans, Fish, Petroleum

BY LILLIAN MACKESY
Post-Crescent Food Editor

SAN FRANCISCO — Americans in about 10 years may be getting their protein from the soybeans, fish and even from petroleum to bring major changes in the American diet.

In some cases it will mean a whole new form of traditional foods, said Dr. Herbert E. Robinson, research vice president of Swift & Co. A member of the White House Conference on Nutrition, Robinson spoke at the 1970 Newspaper Food Editors Conference Wednesday.

The two major stumbling blocks to the development of what he called "super-nutritious" foods are consumer attitudes and governmental restrictions. The food industry and a major petroleum company already are studying a new protein concentrate from a substance called ethanol, he said, with pilot plants being considered. The production of protein by growing yeast on hydrocarbons already is becoming big scale in the field of animal food supplements. Gulf Oil has a processing plant in California, following those in Europe, Japan and Russia.

"However, if the public is to take advantage of these nutritionally superior foods," Robinson said, "There will have to be a major change in attitude toward imitations."

The scientist explained that the high degree of nutrition in many forms of the processed food he called super nutritious would come from adding vitamins, proteins and minerals not found in the basic ingredients. These foods would include breakfast cereals, frozen and other fresh main dishes, he said.

Under present regulations, if the minerals, vitamin or protein content of so-called standard foods is altered, these products must be labeled "imitation." This has been a big deterrent to the development of new food forms, Robinson said.

Not Inferior

"The widespread belief is that an imitation food is an inferior one," he said. "This is nonsense because an imitation food, so labeled even now can mean 'superior' in its quality of nutrition. It would be desirable if these foods could carry a name to accurately identify them for consumers — as in the case of margarine — without the connotation of imitation."

Although margarine is not considered an imitation dairy product today, it was the first with its origin in the early 1900s. Robinson said.

Meat will remain the major source of protein in our diet, the scientists said, but protein from soybeans and other sources including fish meal and petroleum will provide a great opportunity to improve the nutritional quality of snack foods and soft drinks.

"Perhaps the most dramatic success story in United States agriculture is the growth of soybeans from obscurity to the largest protein and oil crop source in the country in just a few years," he said.

Soy Protein

"Your per capita share of one-quarter pound of soy protein a year may not sound like much now," he told the food editors, "but five years ago you probably ate none and five years from now your intake will be more than 20 times what it is today.

"There also is no question that fish protein concentrates will become an important source of protein for humans. The production of acceptable and nutritious protein products from fish has become a reality.

A large-scale pilot plant is scheduled for completion in Washington this year, and a $2 million contract has been awarded to Ocean Harvesters in Los Angeles by the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries. The plant will convert 50 tons of raw fish into 8 tons of fish protein concentrate."

It will take a massive education effort by government and industry if these new forms for traditional foods are to be accepted, Robinson said, since "Mr. and Mrs. Consumer do not like to consume totally unfamiliar foods no matter what claims are made for them nutritionally."

Black Creek Area

Summer Recreation Program 'Successful'

BLACK CREEK — The first summer recreation program here ended last month and has been called a success by Dennis Peterson, who headed the program.

Peterson based the success of the first year on the interest shown by parents, claiming that the children would not have become involved if their parents had not supported the program.

"If adults can become involved, it gives them something in common with their youngsters," he said. "It may help to bridge the gap between them and create a situation of closeness in a time of need."

Approximately 50 baseball games were played by the traveling teams and town teams. Girls' softball, though successful, lacked a sufficient number of games. A girls' league is tentatively planned for next year.

Bowling Popular

Bowling and football were popular also. The bowling program ran for six weeks. Both boys and girls participated in flag football.

Some 60 students were involved in archery. A tournament was held and Gene Johnson won first place; Vernon Ort, second; and Janet Zuleger, third. An archery club was formed and affiliation with the Wisconsin Field Archers and the national association may be sought.

Area residents have made a number of requests for new programs next year. More than 500 people requested that swimming lessons be offered at a guarded beach in order to make better use of the lake.

Over 90 requests have been received to start men's softball and nearly 40 women have shown an interest in women's softball.

A Tee League for small boys is planned for next year. Boys hit the ball off a tee. This teaches level swinging and basic fundamentals, Peterson said. Almost 20 boys have shown an interest in the league.

Other requests have been made for a winter basketball program, a women's volleyball league, an ice-skating rink and junior league bowling.

The director added, "The importance of the program, once completely established, will be told by how many children we have running in the street or involved in problems."

Persons and groups involved in the program include Bud Rohm, Sheriff Calvin Spice and his deputies, K & B Auto, Don, Sylvester and Ray Theobald, Center Valley Co-Op, the Bank of Black Creek and the village Board.

Baton Lessons To be Offered

Chamber Sets Registration for Annual Project

STOCKBRIDGE — Registration for baton twirling lessons, sponsored by the Stockbridge Community Chamber of Commerce, will be at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the high school, according to Mrs. John Karls, coordinator of the program.

Children, from four-year-olds through seniors in high school, are eligible to participate in the half-hour instructions, which begin Oct. 4. The first class will start at 6 p.m.

Mrs. Donna Schwantes, New Holstein, who instructed the first class here eight years ago, will be the teacher. Parents are asked to bring the children they are registering with them Monday.

Knowles Sees Tax Increase

Prediction in Contrast to Olson Campaign Promise

MADISON (AP) — Gov. Warren P. Knowles is quoted as saying state tax increases seem almost inevitable next year, sharply in contrast to a campaign approach being taken by the Republican candidate for governor, Jack Olson.

The Milwaukee Sentinel, in today's editions, said Knowles told an interviewer that he would propose a balanced tax and spending budget were he seeking another term.

But there seems "no way" that the 1971 legislature can avoid raising taxes to meet what some sources have predicted could be a $2 billion biennial budget, the Republican governor was quoted as saying.

Not Running

Knowles is not seeking re-election. Republicans have chosen Lt. Gov. Olson as his replacement, facing Democrat Patrick J. Lucey in the Nov. 3 election.

Olson has tread lightly on the 1971 tax outlook, while Lucey has said it is too early to predict that tax increases won't be needed.

Knowles said the state's next governor is going to have to worry about financing higher costs for schools, welfare and pollution abatement.

He said he would favor revision of the increased 4 per cent sales tax which the Republican-controlled legislature adopted two years ago, and would provide a refund to needy families.

No Refund

Knowles proposed a $1.5 billion budget for 1969-71 with a 3 per cent sales tax and refunds. The legislature reduced the package to $1.56 billion, and increased the sales tax over protests from the Democratic minority

"The one big plus" which Wisconsin taxpayers would get from the credit-refund proposal, Knowles said, would be refund-exempt "payment of sales taxes on all items by our out-of-state visitors."

Bowling Scores

WITTENBERG — Joyce Aanonson rolled a 570 series for the highest in the women's handicap league in Wittenberg's Monday and Tuesday evening bowling. Dorothy Podjaski had a 223 for high game. Lou's Bar claimed top honors with a 2,218 series and a 779 game. Celia Tushkowski had a 210 single.

James Leslie slammed a 234 game for high single in the men's 820 League. Terry Derrow had a 557 series including a 214 game. Dennis Kriesel rolled a 556 series. Dan's Barber Shop had the high team series, a 2,596; Rathzkeller rolled an 876 for high team game.

In 775 Handicap League action Dennis Trezebiatowski was high with a 215 single and a 504 series. Willie Hoppa had a 202 single. Pike Lake rolled the 2,260 high team series; Rosholt Hotel had the 818 high team game.

Football Is Topic At Clintonville Rotary Meeting

CLINTONVILLE — The Rotarians became better acquainted with the Truckers through the program presented at the Monday noon luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club.

Dave Husman was program chairman and introduced Chet Jurkovac, varsity football coach at the senior high school. Also introduced were the three assistant coaches, Robert Tomczyk, Bruce Parkovich and Werner Wernberg, and the Truckers' co-captains, Randy Nelson and Mike Malmke.

Jurkovac showed video tape of the players for this year. It was hoped that those attending the meeting would become familiar with the names and faces of the players, and be able to recognize them at the homecoming game Saturday afternoon when the Truckers meet the Seymour Indians.

District Attorney's Office Settles Lawsuit Against Bonding Firm

The Outagamie County district attorney's office, representing the State of Wisconsin, has settled a $10,000 lawsuit it initiated in Circuit Court in June against an Indiana bonding company which previously failed to produce bond for an Ohio man charged with the burglary of a downtown jewelry store.

Assistant Dist. Atty R. Thomas Cane said Wednesday the office will file a stipulation for dismissal of the suit against the United Bonding Insurance Co., of Indianapolis, in County Court.

The firm sent the district attorney's office an $8,750 check earlier this week, which will go into the county treasury With a return of 87.5 per cent, the office considers the case closed.

The litigation begun in June against the firm has its roots in a crime committed in Appleton almost three years ago.

1967 Burglary

On Dec. 17, 1967, the Martin J. Hupka jewelry store, at 336 W. College Ave, was broken into, and about $5,000 worth of merchandise was taken. Later that month, Harold B. Lutchin, 37, formerly of Cincinati, Ohio, was taken into custody by Ohio authorities as a suspect in the Appleton crime.

In January of 1968, Lutchin was extradicted from Ohio and brought to Outagamie County, to face charges of burglary and theft in connection with the jewelry store break-in. He was confined in the county jail until July of 1968, when he had a first court appearance on the felony counts

On July 13, an Outagamie County judge set bail of $10,000, and Lutchin was later released on a corporate surety bond in that amount, through the United Bonding Insurance Co of Indianapolis.

Failed to Appear

After legal haggling that lasted more than a year, trial for Lutchin was scheduled for Oct 15, 1969. He failed to appear. By the agreement he held with the bonding firm, the company was required to pay the $10,000 in exchange for the defendant who didn't show.

Lutchin, however, had been arrested earlier the same day by police in Cincinati, supposedly while committing a burglary.

In its suit with the district attorney's office, United Bonding argued that since Lutchin had been confined, it would not be required to pay the bond money since it was hardly possible for him to be present at trial

Outagamie County refuted that, saying Lutchin had been confined because of his own wrongdoing.

Cane said Wednesday that Lutchin, who is presently in the Ohio State Penittentiary, still awaits further action on the charges here.

Consumer Coordinator Quits Post

MADISON (AP) — The state Department of Justice's coordinator of consumer affairs, Mrs. Betty Cooper, has resigned from her job to devote more time to consumer education.

Because of recent legislation giving the department investigative and injunctive powers enabling the attorney general to move into the enforcement field of consumer protection, the job will not be refilled.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Arvid Sather said: "When Betty was hired, our consumer program was less law enforcement because we didn't have the tools"

Mrs. Cooper's job involved writing a column and coordination of governmental and private energies

Mrs. Cooper said her resignation doesn't imply criticism of the department's consuner protection activities She said she had an "excellent rapport" with her superiors.

"There is so much to be done that can't be done sitting at a desk." Mrs. Cooper said, adding she "wanted more opportunity to communicate with the consumer in education"

The resignation has been in effect for more than a month, but was not officially announced until Thursday.

Universities Termed Last Chance for Ill of Society

Universities are "still the only existing hope for solution" to the persistent problems that face society, Dr. Thomas S. Smith, Lawrence University president, told students and faculty Tuesday.

In a welcoming address at a matriculation day convocation in the Memorial Chapel, Smith described student disaffection and its relation to a college of arts and sciences and recent changes at the school.

"We at Lawrence fortunately were able to voice dissent without seriously damaging the foundations of our college," he said in reference to the type of disruptions that closed universities last year.

He noted that those events, however, spurred consideration at LU to the purpose of a university — to provide society with a place where the examination and generation of ideas can take place.

This means that older ideas and methods must be examined and sifted, he said. What is found useful should be applied to the problems of society.

Smith warned students that regardless of the changes sought for society, there is no purpose in damaging an institution of higher learning

"Even though some may feel that, given the persistent problems, universities have failed society, they are still the only existing hope for solution," he said.

The university president emphasized that ideas orginate from and must remain with the individual. They are his and not the institutions.'

Action following the evaluation of an idea also is an individual matter. "If a group of individuals related to an institution, such as a college participate in concerted action, it may seem that the institution is performing the action," he said.

This conception, he believes, resulted last year when universities acted in a way that attempted to commit the entire community to a particular point of view. This is dangerous, he said, because at this point, behavior exists not in searching for ideas but for political action and indoctrination, which negates the true role of the university.

The president indicated that Lawrence has undergone change throughout its 123-year history, but recently the process has been so accelerated that the impact will not be determined for years.

Concerning social legislation, he mentioned changes in dormitory visitation hours and the sale of beer on campus.

The university has a responsible position concerning drug use, he said. He warned students that authorities are seeking traffic lines of drugs, and reminded that university policy conforms with state and federal laws.

Social legislation is premised on the ideas that "no single constituency should gain advantage which, in turn, is a disadvantage to another." There are commitments to past students, benefactors and faculty members he pointed out.

Smith listed various changes in graduation requirements for freshmen. He said that policies carry a notion of the individual nature of entering students. The universities should not shape thought to a preconceived image, but help students develop their own interests, he said.

The inclusion of students on university committees, a recent innovation at LU, helps them to know how and why policy is formulated and decisions are reached, he explained.

In order for Lawrence to continue to grow, academic freedom must be carefully protected, Smith said. This means safeguarding the freedom to think.

"The freedom to think can be abridged by the force of fear. Without that freedom, all the derived freedoms are worth nothing," he added.

Give the United Fund a Push

The United Fund is off to an encouraging start in its 1970 fund campaign. But as always it will take the conscientious participation of every wage earner in the area to put the drive over the top when it concludes at the end of October.

There are two basic reasons why this year's goal represents a 12 per cent increase over last year. The 19 agencies which depend upon the United Fund for their financial support have experienced inflation in costs the same as businesses and individuals have in the past year. And secondly, while the Appleton fund has made giant strides in recent years to increase the level of per capita giving, we still rank ninth among comparable funds in the state despite the fact that this is an economically prosperous area.

One of the marks of the pride residents have in their community is the measure of their support of their United Fund. Since United Fund took over from the former Community Chest here Appleton has begun to establish a reputation for success.

That's why it is so important that everyone who is able contributes to this year's campaign.

Too Many Tourists?

The concern over too many campers and other tourists which is beginning to be expressed by some Door County residents and some in the tourist business in other parts of the state is old stuff in some other parts of the country.

In Vermont the state is now making an organized effort to reduce advertising and promotion of recreational areas for the simple reason that there simply won't be the lure any longer of wide open spaces, the quiet and beauty of the country, the pure waters and lovely woodlands, if the state is overrun with tourists.

Oregon is going even further. It is discouraging not only a higher percentage of tourists but new residents as well. The James G. Blaine Society, named after a 19th Century presidential candidate who advocated America for Americans, has as its slogan Oregon for Oregonians, and members wear "I'm a Blaine Man" buttons as well as bumper stickers reading "Go Back Where You Came From" on their automobiles. A magazine warns of the terrible mist in Oregon from some 300 days of rain a year.

Legislation and ordinances are reflecting the concern. Governor Tom McCall says that the Legislature has passed more environmental bills in 30 months than all the other 49 states have in 30 years. Littering now means fines up to $250 and six months in jail as well as helping to clean up the highway trash. DDT is banned. Even private beaches are open to the public, according to a State Supreme Court decision. In another effort to halt an influx of tourists and tourist camps, Oregonians have first chances at camping sites where reservations must be made in advance. The budget of the State Travel Information Division was cut and probably will be again next year. No more highways can be built along the Pacific Coast if they would even modify the natural environment—and what highway wouldn't?

Other areas of the country, such as Yellowstone Park, are having increasing troubles with just too many people, especially those who don't care whether they toss beer cans, leave garbage or otherwise desecrate public and private property.

But we do not have to look far afield for the concern over too many tourists. Door County has been heavily promoted in the Chicago area in recent years and sadly enough the effort has been successful. The Wisconsin Dells long ago became practically a caricature of a recreational area and we wonder a little what gubernatorial candidate Jack Olson, a long-time promoter of the Dells has to say about it. In several Northern Wisconsin areas there is pressure for more prohibitions on campers, hunters and snowmobiles.

In part the trouble comes from just too many people, perhaps more leisure time and the overwhelming desire to get away from the cities and heavily populated areas. But it has also come from tourist promoters who have not had the vision to realize they are killing the proverbial golden goose.

Governor Knowles recently bemoaned the publicity given to mercury content of some of the state's streams. Maybe that sort of publicity is exactly what we need.

Over-Reaction at Madison?

The Madison news dispatches in recent weeks have provided dramatic details of the preoccupation of legislators with what they call the latent problems of security at the state capitol and related facilities housing state officials, including those elected by the people of Wisconsin.

In view of some of the disturbing examples of lawlessness in the capital city recently, no reasonable constituent will fault the legislative leadership for its desire to replace the handful of night watchmen and tourist guides in uniform that have personified the constabulary at the capitol and its annexes during the memory of most residents of Wisconsin.

But when the legislature seriously contemplates a trained corps of professional police, equivalent to the full complement of uniformed officers in many of the middle sized cities of Wisconsin, to patrol the corridors, protect the legislative chambers and others, scrutinize visitors, and ration space in hearing rooms and the legislative galleries, we are moved to wonder whether this is not a case of excessive reaction to admittedly unfortunate events.

We would not disparage the need for security. But some of the details of the elaborate protective plan appear excessively zealous, to put it gently. The board of government operations, as one example, approved the expenditure of about $315,000 for electronic surveillance and alarm gear in the capitol and other official habitations of the state government. Offhand, we would suggest that an alarm system could be stretched into every nook and cranny of the statehouse for that generous sum of money.

The geography of state government housing arrangements may not be entirely familiar to some residents of Wisconsin. We would recall, therefore, that the center of the capitol proper is precisely one block distant from the joint city-county building in Madison, which contains the headquarters of the Madison municipal police and the Dane County sheriff's men who together compose the second largest force of professional policemen employed in any locality of Wisconsin. The University of Wisconsin has its own police patrol at the Madison campus. There is now an effective and demonstrably effective compact with other municipalities and counties. To suggest that the state government should have a force of up to 60 men, together with startlingly expensive technical back-up, will strike many of us as somewhat steep.

Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for Sept. 24, 1870.

A young, handsome, intelligent boy, not above 18 years of age, who desires to learn the blacksmith's and machinist's trade in all its branches, can hear of a permanent position by applying to this office.

But none need apply who cannot conscientiously subscribe to the following rules, ground out expressly for this office by our champion mangler — imported for the occasion:

1 — No smoking allowed — except by the editor — under any circumstances. This is prohibited because of its tendency to mar the artistic execution of our premium (?) composing.

2nd — No talking will be tolerated, except on the occasions of state, such as asking the foreman "to see a man," etc.

3rd — Upon the approach of any holiday, compositors must see that the Foreman — with a big F — is presented with a gold-headed cane, watch, or some such article of small value. This is enacted for the purpose of creating a feeling of gratitude for the "boys" toward their noble benefactor, the Foreman.

4th — One dollar will be paid to each compositor who corrects errors which are not marked by the proofreader. Comps that will be able to acquire a fortune in a very short time.

5th — Each compositor will be required to furnish his own anvil and bench, files, and other paraphernalia . . .

6th — Compositors who willfully disregard these rules will be allowed the privilege of putting on their dusters and walking off.

U.S. 6th Fleet Handicapped In Mediterranean Crisis

BY HENRY J. TAYLOR

ATHENS — While rumors swept the Middle East that the U.S. 6th Fleet would intervene against the Palestine commando skyjackers, our force is tied up tighter than a drum in the eastern Mediterranean.

In fact, this country — Greece — is the only country in the entire eastern Mediterranean where the U.S. 6th Fleet can congenially call.

It cannot go to neighboring Turkey, long a solid anchor of NATO in the eastern Mediterranean, without provoking street riots, protest-bombings and crippling internal strikes. That represents a complete reversal in our defense capability in this explosive part of the world. And in the light of the fiery Israel-Arab situation it is the main immediate problem of U.S. Vice-Admiral Isaac C. Kidd Jr., now newly commanding the 6th Fleet.

South Coast Hostile

Moreover, west of Turkey and except for Israel, Tunisia and Morocco, the entire southern rim of the Mediterranean is hostile to us. Syrian, Egyptian and Algerian harbors are available to the expanding Soviet Mediterranean fleet. And even on the Iberian peninsula at the Atlantic gate to the Mediterranean, opinion is incensed over what millions of Spaniards and Portugese call our double-standard — one for colonial powers, another for the Afro-Asians.

Meanwhile, Admiral Kidd,

aboard his flagship, the U.S.S. Springfield, a light guided-missile cruiser, has taken over a profoundly worried fleet now alerted for immediate call in a nearly impossible situation.

Behind the scenes, and at this moment, Admiral Kidd's command consists of about 50 vessels, including two aircraft carriers and 200 aircraft. The personnel numbers 25,000. Even with the additional Marines arriving aboard the helicopter carrier Guam, his force has only a combat-ready battalion landing team of a scant 3,000 Marines.

His ships are also aging ships which show an encroaching obsolescence. Admiral Kidd does not see how he can compensate for time's natural wastage. An alarming proportion of his fleet was built during the 1939-45 war period and is 25 years old.

No British Support

Its support by the once all-powerful British navy is all but negligible. In fact, Admiral Kidd finds that the entire worldwide British navy has now been reduced to three aircraft carriers, two commando ships, eight nuclear-powered submarines, 33 conventional submarines, three cruisers, and 87 large and small destroyers and frigates. British naval strength in the Mediterranean is merely the converted carrier Albion at Cyprus, the guided-missile destroyer Fife at Malta, and the frigate Euryalus at Gibraltar.

Moreover, Admiral Kidd is constantly harassed today by the Soviet probings in these waters. For example, the Soviet "tanker" Kustanaia suddenly arrived on the flank of his flagship Springfield in the crisis over the planes and passengers skyjacked to the Jordanian desert. A Soviet helicopter hovered nearby. Both were loaded with electronic gear to intercept messages between Admiral Kidd's Springfield and 6th Fleet units cruising off Lebanon's coast regarding our possible intervention.

Although the Soviet has no aircraft carriers (anywhere) its Mediterranean fleet's ships now outnumber Admiral Kidd's command. Then, looking further, he sees the Soviet naval expansion not only in the Mediterranean but to all the seven seas.

Admiral Kidd estimates that the Soviet fleet now consists of 75 nuclear-powered and 320 diesel-powered submarines, 25 cruisers, 100 destroyers, another 100 destroyer escorts, 275 patrol vessels, 300 mine sweepers, 300 torpedo boats, 125 missile boats, two helicopter carrier vessels, 130 amphibious craft and literally thousands of support, auxiliary and service craft.

Red Fleet New

Of nearly equal importance, the Reds have in these waters and worldwide a nearly new fleet. Only 1 per cent of the entire Soviet fleet is 20 years old, NATO Supreme Commander Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster told me. That the Soviet is driving all out to seize supreme seapower from our country seems obvious to Admiral Kidd — while the United States Navy is admittedly inadequate to meet our worldwide national and international commitments.

The quiet, oh, so quiet expansion of Soviet maritime power was the military phenomenon of the 1960s. At close hand this looks like a relentlessly rising flood tide in the 1970s.

Admiral Kidd has his work cut out for him around here, as the Mideast continues to boil, the skyjackers add to that explosive turmoil, and the Kremlin makes its bid to achieve the balance factor in global power. After a visit to our NATO naval headquarters near Naples, to the Greek island of Corfu where elements of our 6th Fleet are visiting, and then here at our eastern Mediterranean command's control center, the grim question arises: Who is policing the peace of the world now?

Wisconsin Report

Olson, Lucey Have Little New to Offer On State Finances

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — To Mr. John P. Reynolds, vice president, Wisconsin Taxpayers Alliance:

This is to apologize for failing to attend the Alliance-sponsored forum for the Democratic and Republican nominees for governor after having returned an acceptance to your kind invitation.

Wyngaard

As it happened, I had work here in Madison that appeared to me more profitable than spending the day listening to the discussions of Mr. Olson and Mr. Lucey, illuminating as they undoubtedly were for those listeners who are not daily exposed to the doings and the utterances of the men who are now the titular leaders of their respective political parties.

As you understand, these men are kind and thoughtful enough to send me each day what they have said or plan to say. I read their missives, and I file them. My position reminds me of the New York drama critic who once wrote an unfavorable review, and then apologized with the explanation that he viewed the performance from an unfavorable position. His seat faced the stage.

The Positions Stated

Now that the incident has passed, I make so bold as to say that my judgment was supported by developments at your forum.

The candidates said no more, and no less, than they said in their press releases and campaign speeches over many preceding weeks. Had they deviated significantly, that would have been news, and I would have regretted my absence. But at this stage of the campaign, a politician dares not deviate significantly. He would offend supporters and cause dangerous curiosity in the minds of the independents and the uncommitted about his reliability and the quality of his proffered leadership.

Mr. Lucey ventured the forecast that the next state budget may rise half a billion dollars above the present record of spending. The suggestion generated some headlines. But it should have surprised no one who has been familiar with state spending trends. Some in the audience might have wondered about his daring—since he acknowledged that any such increase would require additional taxation.

Appeals to Large Group

But the candidate knew exactly what he was doing. The voter who wants a fiscal conservative won't vote for Lucey. The Democratic candidate is appealing to that considerable and constantly increasing body of the electorate that has a direct interest, a vested interest, in public spending—comprising hundreds of thousands.

Lucey stands for property tax relief.

Visible, perceptible property tax relief cannot be achieved without heavy new state taxation. He wants the backing of the school lobby, the public service employe lobby, the elderly worrying about erosion of their savings, the young worried about higher education, the thousands of families on public assistance, etc., etc.

His program papers are replete with new proposals for public service programs or enlargement of existing programs. He would only inspire hoots of derision if he pretended that he would not ask for higher taxation.

Takes Same Position

To only a slightly less visible degree, Olson entered the discussion with a fixed position dictated by his previous assertions, his record, and his participation in the Republican state administration.

Gov. Knowles used the cautious budgeting pledge and resistance to higher taxes when he unhorsed Gov. Reynolds in 1964. He invented the theme of expanding the economy to produce more tax income which Olson now offers as his own position. Perhaps most important, Olson would squander his support among Republican-oriented voters if he did not acknowledge the reality that most of them feel they are now overtaxed and that government has become too hungry.

But both candidates carefully kept retreat routes open, knowing that they may be required to lead the state government for the next four years.

Olson qualified his economy theme by exemption of "essentials" not now foreseen. Lucey conspicuously avoided a promise to repeal the sales tax while implying that he would raise new money exclusively through upper bracket income taxes—an unlikely solution.

So, what else is new, John?

Books Give a Room Too 'Busy' a Look

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

These friends of mine moved into a new apartment, and the wife, with some misgivings, called in an interior decorator for a "consultation."

When the decorator saw my

friends' books, and the shelves to be put in along the front-room walls, she raised her hands in genteel horror. "You'll have to put grillwork over the bookcases," she said. "Otherwise the books will give the room too 'busy' a look."

That tore it. The decorator was hustled out of the apartment before she knew what was happening to her. And the walls were covered with books — as busy as they can be, without grillwork.

This little incident is typical, I think, of the essential shallowness and phoniness of most of those soi-disant experts in interior decorating. They are interested in making a room look like a picture-book, for show-off purposes, not for intelligent and comfortable living.

They say that their aim is to make the house reflect the owners' personalities — but they are, in the main, incapable of understanding personalities other than their own, or values in living that go deeper than the cold perfection of a rug advertisement.

Abolish these pretentious parasites, I say, and send them back to labors for which their limitations more obviously fit them — designing lace Valentines, or hand-tinting He and She pillowcases.

The avant-garde decorators, in my estimation, are no better than their conventional brethren. They confuse "modern" with "startling," and mistake sterility for simplicity. Most modern apartments planned by a decorator give me the queasy feeling that all the occupants died three weeks ago and the symbols of living were hidden in the closets.

I would no sooner let someone plan my home than pick my wife. It is essentially a personal task, and its sacred character goes back to antiquity. If your taste is admittedly bad in such matters, the answer is to improve your taste through study and experiment, not to let a mercenary stranger arbitrarily decide what he thinks is best for you.

The homes that are happiest are generally a little sloppy and unconventional. A passion for neatness, precision, the exact blend and the right balance indicates a family in which the natural love of people has been transferred to the unnatural love of things.

Overfeeding a Child Is Foolish Discipline

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson. What harm can a person do making a child eat? The father has four children, aged 3 to 8, fills their plates heaping full, like he does his own plate, and makes them eat every bite, and I mean makes them eat it.

I have protested, and I can't begin to eat what he makes them eat. He says if you make them eat a big plateful, they won't be coming in the house in an hour's time asking for cookies and stuff. It makes me sick, to see them trying to eat all he gives them. If they don't eat he takes a belt to them. — W.F.M.

It can make them fat. Early eating habits may not be easy to break. It can overload their digestive tracts.

Possibly worst of all, it can make the youngsters dread

Dr. Thosteson

mealtimes, and bring about a deep resentment against their father — which I am sure he doesn't want.

I hope he will realize what he is doing and change in time.

A healthy child doesn't have to be forced to eat. He'll eat when he is hungry.

If the father wants to make a rule of no eating between meals, the youngsters will learn soon enough to eat enough at mealtime.

I can agree that some kids are allowed to have too many cookies and too much pop and candy between meals. That, however, can be controlled by a rule that a non-sweet snack is all right if a child is hungry, but the sweet stuff is limited.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a man of 76 and troubled with a continuous noise in my right ear. Is there any relief known? Sometimes it stops for a day or two, then continues its merry way, and it can be very annoying. — D.H.

Sometimes yes, sometimes no. Various types are described in my booklet, "Ear Noises, Their Causes and Cures." For a copy, send 15 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dr. Thosteson, care of the Post-Crescent.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a mongoloid son He is 15 and his I.Q. is in the 50s. Is there any research on this? Are they still working on it? What are they doing? Can they prevent other women from having mongoloid children? — Mrs. B.R.

Indeed yes, research is going on, but it is dreadfully difficult to find a clue as to what causes mongolism.

It has been established that mongoloids have an extra chromosome — 47 instead of the normal 46. Some believe that instead of this being truly an extra chromosome, it is a case of one chromosome being broken, in some way, into two.

This does not provide us with any means of preventing it from occurring. Not yet, anyway.

Much of the painstaking research covers generations — trying to trace whether any heriditary pattern is involved. Other studies are trying to determine whether there is a relationship to any disease or other condition.

Research that we currently read about — creating parts of chromosomes in laboratories, for one example — may in the long run prove to be vital information in understanding mongolism and ultimately doing something about it.

My answer, then, is: much study, no sensational "breakthroughs" so far.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

The U.S. Sixth Fleet's aircraft carrier U.S.S. Independence, steams in the Eastern Mediterranean Thursday, ready to support evacuation of Americans from war-torn Jordan. (AP Wirephoto)

6th Fleet Ships, Russians in Step

6th FLEET 4-36-1 P8 8Du

By JOHN LENGEL
Associated Press Writer

WITH THE 6TH FLEET (AP) — The U.S. 6th Fleet with its jet bombers and Marines is steaming 150 miles from the troubled Middle East with the potent Soviet Mediterranean squadron following determinedly, but politely, in its wake.

U.S. ships are moving in step with Soviet vessels wherever they may be in the Mediterranean. "You could say we share a common interest in what the other guy is doing," says Rear Adm. Roger Spreen.

The 6th Fleet was put on alert after Arab guerrillas hijacked four jetliners two weeks ago and held their passengers hostage. The Nixon administration ordered the fleet to stand by in case help is needed in evacuating Americans from war-torn Jordan.

Ships in Sight

At least one of six Soviet ships in the area is in sight of the carriers Independence and Saratoga at all times.

The light amber sides of a Kashin antiaircraft-missile destroyer, serving as observer for a Soviet surface-to-surface missile cruiser over the horizon, was spotted by the Independence Thursday.

Sometimes the big Russian cruisers show up with their crews rolling out missiles or training their gun turrets. "You can't tell if they're doing that for training or to show us something," said one officer on the Independence.

Fleets Matched

On paper, the two fleets are roughly matched with about 50 ships each, including submarines The third U.S. carrier — the John F. Kennedy — and the helicopter assault carrier Guam have yet to arrive. Although the Soviets have two helicopter carriers, none is in the Mediterranean.

Four other Soviet destroyers and one cruiser have been cleared for passage through the Bosporus from the Black Sea But there is no way of telling whether they will join the Mediterranean force.

Seven U.S. admirals from various command levels have visited the carriers for coordination and a first-hand assessment of the situation.

The carriers are launching routine training, surveillance and armed-fighter defense patrols. But there is no deck of fully armed droop-nosed F4 Phantoms or A4 Skyhawks ready to attack, even though planes could be rigged quickly with bombs and rockets if alert levels were raised.

The Independence and Saratoga are positioned roughly south of Cyprus and north of Egypt — a 100-mile-long, 100-mile-wide rectangle in which the fleet has operated many times before.

The Marine amphibious group already here, with its reinforced battalion of 1,500 men, is positioned well to the west in the vicinity of Crete

Fleet intelligence officers view the Jordanian crisis as a battle burning out but with every potential of heating up again

Nixon Trip Plans Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, who leaves Sunday for a nine-day trip to five European countries, will meet in Ireland with U.S. representatives to the Paris peace talks.

The White House announced Thursday the President will discuss the Vietnam peace talks with chief negotiator David K.E. Bruce at Kilfrush House, 12 miles west of Tiperrary.

Mrs. Nixon will accompany the President through most of the trip, but will stay in Rome Monday while he and Secretary of State William P. Rogers visit ships of the 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean

Mrs. Nixon plans to visit Boys Town in Rome and inspect an adult literacy program She will rejoin her husband in Naples Wednesday where he will meet with NATO's southern European commanders.

From Naples, the Nixons will fly to Belgrade — the first visit by an American president to communist Yugoslavia. President Tito will host the Nixons at a black-tie dinner and a reception.

Mrs. Nixon will entertain women reporters Thursday, and the Nixons plan a formal dinner for Tito and his wife Thursday night.

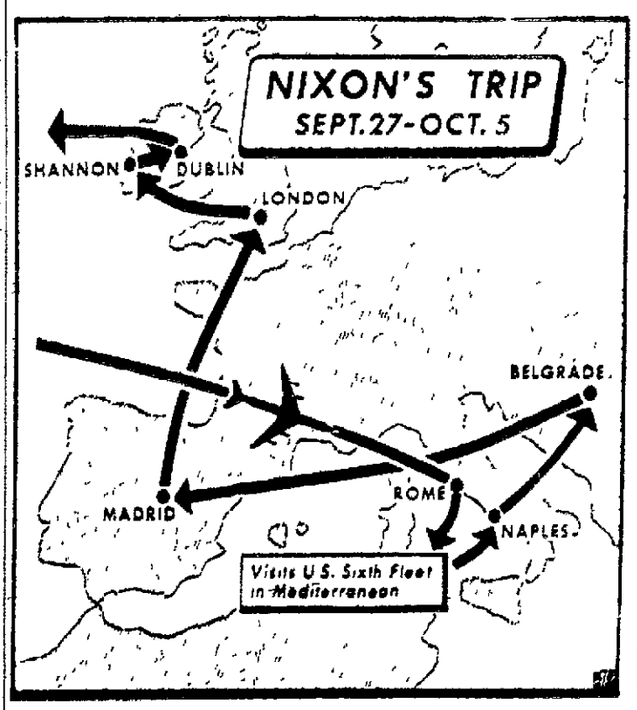
The presidential party will fly to Spain Oct. 2 where Nixon will be welcomed by Gen. Francisco Franco, his wife and high Spanish officials.

The Spanish Foreign Ministry announced today that Nixon will confer with Franco in El Prad Palace. Accompanying the Spanish leader will be Prince Juan Carlos de Bourbon, Franco's eventual successor as king; the Spanish vice president, Luis Carrero Blanco, and Foreign Minister Lopez Bravo.

The Nixons will be entertained at a dinner in the royal palace and leave for England the following morning. President Nixon will have lunch with Queen Elizabeth and British Prime Minister Edward Heath at Heath's country estate.

The presidential party will spend only a few hours in England, flying in midafternoon to Shannon, Irelad, for a motorcade to Kilfrush House.

While Nixon discusses the future of the Paris peace talks, Mrs. Nixon will tour County Mayo to sightsee and look for kin bearing her maiden name of Ryan



School Head Likens Rooms To Jail Cells

Conditions Cited As Major Cause Of Student Trouble

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — This city's new school chief thinks too many classrooms are oversized jail cells and teachers spend too much time acting as jailers

That's one of the reasons for student rebellion, said Dr. Thomas A Shaheen The surprising thing is that more do not rebel, he added in an interview Thursday.

"Our schools are organized on a semiprison approach, on crime and punishment, and cops and robbers techniques," he said

Lack of Trust

"We have lack of trust—sign-in and sign-out slips, detention systems, wardens and jailers, fear of escape, regimentation, limited opportunities for choice, barricaded or locked toilet rooms, cell-like classrooms"

Shaheen, 57, is beginning his first year as superintendent of the 90,000-student San Francisco public school system after five years as schools chief in Rockford, Ill.

He said one of the first things he plans to do is abolish the system of requiring students to sign in and sign out of schools.

He said the sign-in system should not apply to all students when only one out of 30 students violates the rules

Changes Needed

The school buildings themselves need some radical changes too, he added.

"We need to knock down some walls in some of our older school buildings," he said.

"Generally, school buildings across the country have a cell-like structure. The typical classroom is rectangular and has one door and a few windows. It's a large-scale prison cell."

Shaheen said classrooms should be larger, combining several classes in different parts of larger rooms, allowing students to move about with more freedom.

"But the overriding thing, regardless of the structure of the building, is the attitude of the staff and community toward young people," he added.

They need to be treated with respect, and with regard for their basic rights, he said.

Court Backs Elimination Of Seniority

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The 3rd Circuit Court of Apeals has upheld Newark's 1966 abandonment of the seniority system in its attempt to give more Negroes jobs as school administrators

In its decision, handed down Thursday, the court said that "proper integration of faculties is as important as proper integration of schools themselves."

It said that school boards had the duty to integrate faculties and permitting an imbalance would violate the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution

The ruling denied an appeal brought by 10 white teachers who charged that they were discriminated against when the Newark Board of Education decided on Aug. 22, 1968 to abandon its promotion list.

The white teachers said the board had acted unconstitutionally by looking for black teachers to fill positions they had expected to get.

Joseph Walsh, representing the white teachers, said he would appeal the decision to the U.S. Supreme Court.

State Banner Battle Flag In Vietnam

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina State flag that waved untattered in Vietnam has been given to Gov. Bob Scott for the state Department of Archives and History.

The donor is Mitchel W. Shoffner, 23, of Laurel Hill, who carried the red and blue flag in a pack during much of his months in Southeast Asia.

His letter to the governor said, "This particular flag was given to me in South Vietnam by a tank commander who used to attach it to his tank's antenna rod when under fire. Yet this flag has no type of holes in it . . .

"It has been a long time since a North Carolina standard has been carried as a battle flag . . If permissible, I would like to give you this flag, so the blood and honor that went into the baptizing will not be lost to our people."

Satellite Fails To Achieve Orbit

UCHINOURA, Japan (AP) — A Japanese attempt to get a scientific satellite into orbit failed today when the fourth stage of a 43 7-ton rocket apparently did not ignite

Scientists said they then lost track of the 77-foot rocket, called the MU4S1, and that it apparently burned up in the atmosphere after reaching an altitude of some 350 miles above the central Pacific.

The aerospace research center of Tokyo University, designer of the rocket, said it would be some time before it could determine the cause of the malfunction.

Japan has orbited one satellite, a small weather capsule fired Feb 11 The MU4S1 carried the first Japanese satellite designed to gather information about outer space

GM's Vega Has Wash Problem

DETROIT (AP) — The new Chevrolet Vega minicar has run into an unexpected problem—incompatibility with automatic car wash systems.

A trade association has warned operators of car wash systems that the small car would be damaged while going through the line because its undercarriage is one inch below the 5¼-inch minimum

"Extreme caution is advised before washing this car on conveyors," said Automatic Car Wash Association International in a bulletin to its members in 49 states and 15 foreign countries.

A spokesman for General Motors said the firm was working on the problem. "We think it can be alleviated because it affects only one point on the underside of the car."

Bankers' Hours Get New Look

BOSTON (AP) — First there were banker's hours, now there's the banker's week—four working days.

Home Savings Bank of Boston, a $250 million deposit institution, said the shift to the four-day week for its employes was made to coincide with an extension of the banking day — 8:30 a.m. to 5.30 p.m. instead of 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. "banker's hours"

John Guluzian, bank president, said Tuesday that work schedules also are being arranged so that once every five weeks each employe will have a four-day weekend.

GM New-Car Prices Average $136 Higher

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. announced Thursday prices of its 1971 automobiles will average $136 more than those for 1970s, and it left the door open for a possible new increase at the end of a United Auto Workers strike which shut down GM 11 days ago.

GM had produced 208,000 of its 1971s before the UAW shut it down in a strike supporting the union's new contract demands. The Vega, priced at $2,091, went on sale Sept 10. Buicks go on sale Oct 3, while remaining GM lines go on sale next Tuesday.

GM said its average increase for 1971 cars was 4.2 per cent, based on sales volume and optional usage. Optional equipment is raised an average 5.2 per cent.

$49 on Nova

The smallest increase is $49 on the 6-cylinder Chevrolet Nova, and the largest, $855 for the Cadillac Fleetwood Seventy-Five limousine The bottom Nova price, GM's lowest except for the Vega, is $2,367; the Cadillac Seventy-Five's top, $12,094.

The six-cylinder Impala four-door sedan goes from $3,141 to $3,256; the eight-cylinder hardtop from $3,323 to $3,447.

GM normally builds more than half the American-made cars sold in the United States and its prices usually set the industry pattern.

Ford has announced a price increase for 1971 which averages $17 more per car than GM.

Ford and Chrysler, however, were given strike immunity by the UAW while it seeks by strike to bring GM to terms on an agreement the union later will take back to them

GM cited increases in the cost of labor, materials and government-required pollution control devices as prime reasons for 1971 increases.

GM had a $125-average increase a year ago for 1970s, compared with 1969s. Similar reasons were cited then for the boost.

Trust Fund Urged For Transportation

Post-Crescent News Service

MILWAUKEE — Establishment of a single national transportation trust fund administered by the U. S. Department of Transportation, was urged Wednesday night at a Wisconsin Transportation Symposium.

The two-day meeting which opened at the Sheraton-Schroeder Hotel, drew more than 650 persons from all fields of transportation.

The symposium is being sponsored by the Wisconsin Department of Transportation and was described at the opening session as the first of its type in the country.

A proposal for a single transportation trust fund was made by James D. Braman, an administrator in the U. S. Department of Transportation, who substituted for U. S. Secretary of Transportation John Volpe.

Braman's proposal, which has been supported by Volpe on past occasions, has brought sharp rebuttal from the highway industry which does not want to relinquish more than $4 billion in the present Highway Trust Fund now allocated for highway construction purposes.

Shift of Funds

Braman said an amendment to the present Highway Trust Fund would permit states to shift up to 20 per cent of the allocated fund to other specified transportation projects on the basis of the state's particular and individual needs and priorities.

He said the proposed Public Mass Transportation Act of 1970, would provide some 3.1 billion federal dollars for public transportation in cities large and small. Ultimately it would become a $10 billion package.

The bill also would be a companion to the airports-airways act which calls for the investment of $10 billion over the next 12 years to vastly improve air navigation and control and aid in the planning, development and construction of expanded airport facilities.

Speakers throughout the day presented a mixture of growth, clouded by rising costs as they described the railroads and airlines industries.

Harold F. Hammond, president of the Transportation Association of America, Washington, D. C., said the transportation industry contributes $180 billion to the nation's economy annually, and during the 1970s predicted a 6 per cent increase in straight ton miles and a 100 per cent increase in airline miles.

Trouble Areas

"However, there are at least five trouble areas," he said.

Hammond cited the need for better cooperation between labor and mangement "at a time when labor is fanning the flames of inflation with its wage demands with no resulting increase in productivity."

He was critical of the featherbedding issue on trains, the unloading and loading of containers at ports, and other problems that "may lead to binding arbitration of wage contracts."

"What we are leading up is one regulatory agency that will superscede all the regulatory agencies we now have." Hammond said, and continued, "this already has the support of many areas of the transportation industry."

Leonard Murray, president of the Soo Line Railroad, described the bankruptcy of the 10 central railroads as "the best thing that has happened to the railroad industry in this modern era because the shock has brought home the problems of regulations to shippers, legislators, and the public.

"Now we will face up to the need that this country requres a unified transportation policy," Murray said.

Support for Plan

Larry Provo, president of the Chicago & North Western Railway, expressed his agreement and support for a unified transportation policy, adding there is unanimity within the railroad industry for such a program.

Provo spoke of the great advances in the freight movements by the railroads, especially with unitrains hauling coal, ore and solid weights (waste). Commenting on the paper industry of Wisconsin, Provo said the C&NW recently ordered 2,000 freight cars to serve this industry in addition to 9,000 cars already directed to this effort.

William J. Quinn, president of the Milwaukee Road, referring to the problems of the railroads said "the national scene is one of perplexity. There is need for a change. The future is promising, but the present is killing us."

He said the railroads are the best means of the future to solve pollution caused by transportation, problems of congestion of people and the means to move people from one dwntown to another.

Commenting on the freight business, Quinn said railroads haul 41 per cent of intercity freight, "but are losing the ability to build for the future because of taxes, rate regulations and uneconomical services.

Quinn reported that earnings of the nation's railroads were down 50 per cent in the past 15 years, noting that railroads paid 22 per cent of their earnings in taxes while all other forms of transportation paid 5 per cent or less.

Air Transportation

Daniel Priest, vice president of operations for the Air Transport Association of America, spoke in glowing terms for the future of air transportation, noting that traffic projections show a doubling of current figures in five years and tripling in 10 years.

"There are storm clouds, however, especially from the supplemental carriers for nonschedule flights," Priest said.

He said these planes have reported a growth of 40 per cent in one year and last year hauled 24 per cent of all traffic across the Atlantic Ocean.

"This is having an adverse effect on the nation's airlines, which as an industry, expect to operate at a deficit by the end of this year. Earnings are so low and the situation is so serious that airlines are being forced to reassess their equipment reordering program," Priest said.

Priest also put in a strong plug for the development of the supersonic transport (SST), which, he said, is "essential if we are to maintain our aviation leadership."

Hammermill's Nine-Month Earnings Dip

Hammermill Paper Co., Erie, Pa.-based parent of Thilmany Pulp & Paper Co., Kaukauna, has reported a drop in earnings for the first nine months of 1970.

Earnings for the period were $6,708,000, or $1.12 a share, down from $9,080,000, or $1.52 a share, for the comparable period of 1969. Sales for 1970 were a record $245,446,000, an increase of 3 per cent over the $239,273,000 reported for the same period last year.

The firm reported that a 12-week strike at the Hammermill Erie division, plus the economic slowdown were blamed for the earnings decline.

The major impact of the strike was felt in the 12-week period, ending Sept. 6. Hammermill sales for the period were $77 million and earnings were $451,000, or 7 cents a share, down from sales of $79.1 million and earnings of $2,625,000, or 44 cents a share, a year ago.

John H. De Vitt, chairman and chief executive officer, said the course of the national economy for the remainder of the year still is highly uncertain and that Hammermill will not be able to recover sufficiently in the fourth quarter to overcome the unfortunate events of the third quarter. Consequently, he added, earnings for 1970 would now appear to be appreciably below the previous year

Zaug's Will Double Size of Operations

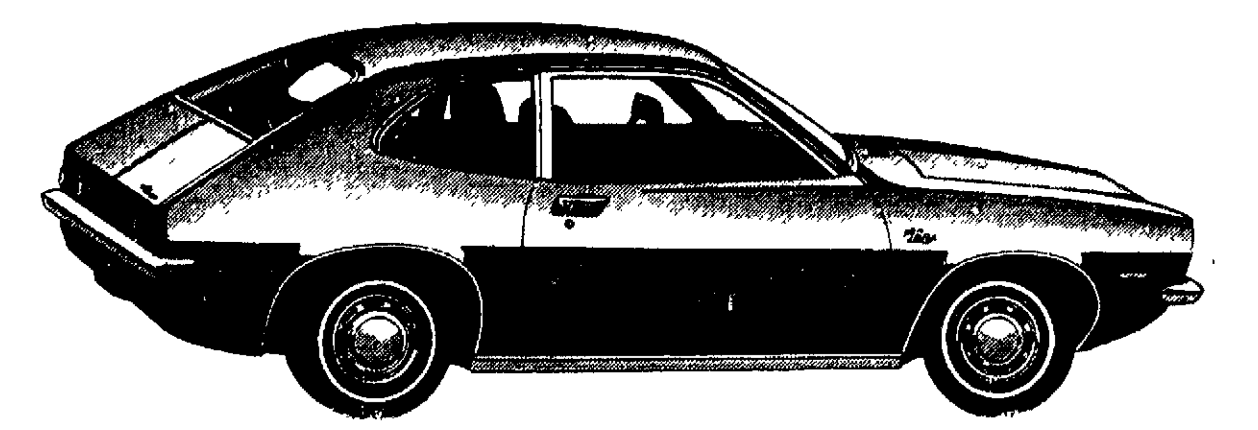
Zaug's, Inc., supplier of on-premises food services, has begun construction on a $250,000 addition that will more than double its present facilities at 4100 W Wisconsin Ave.

Jerry Zaug, general manager, said the addition was needed for an expanding operation and will provide more freezer and cooler space for its food preparation business. The 16,000-square-foot addition should be completed in early 1971.

The building expansion is the second since the firm moved to Appleton from New London in 1961. Since then, sales have quadrupled and employment has grown to over 75, Zaug said.

He said the expansion will allow an increased diversification of services. The firm prepares and delivers foods for concessions and vending machines and provides catering service.

The expansion program will include remodeled and additional office space, food preparation space and a semi-perishable stockroom. It also will include new and expanded areas for vending machine maintenance, vehicle maintenance, refrigerated and frozen food storage, and a place convertible to banquet facilities for more than 500 persons.



Pinto, The Carefree Car — Ford's new entry in the auto field, Pinto, is a little, long-distance car. It is little because it's sized like the economy imports; long-distance because it's built to run a long, long way — between gas stops — between service intervals — a long way between repair bills. Many minor repair services can be made by the owner with a special key called the Pinto Tool Kit. The new Pinto models are being displayed at Van Steen Ford, 3030 W. College Ave., Appleton. (Adv.)

Griesbach to Display New 1971 Chevrolet Cars Tuesday

The full new line of 1971 Chevrolets, including the new small car, Vega 2300, will be on display at Griesbach Chevrolet, Inc., Hortonville, starting Tuesday, Sept. 29. Jerry Griesbach has issud an invitation to everyone to see the new models and reminds that orders now are being taken for the all-new Chevrolet line-up for 1971. The phone number is 779-4557.

Griesbach has a good selection of 70's that are on sale at big savings. Take a short drive and save the difference. Remember, too, that Griesbach's is the areas truck headquarters, specializing in trucks of all sizes. The modern service department is open every nite til 10 p.m. for motorists and truckers.

General Motors' officials state that the new Vega meets the growing desire for an American-built car which — besides being small in size — is fun to drive, safe, comfortable, economical to own and operate, easy to maintain and long lasting in both construction and styling.

The full line of four Vega 2300 models includes a 2-door sedan, a 2-door hatchback coupe and a sporty 2-door "Kammback" wagon — all 4-passenger models. There is also a unique 1-passenger Vega panel express truck available with a second passenger seat.

With a wheelbase of 97 inches, an overall length under 170 inches and a sedan weight of 2,190 pounds, the Vega is generally the same size as other economy cars but offers significant differences.

It is nearly eight inches lower and four inches wider than the best selling foreign car. It has greater passenger room and trunk space. Its lower center of gravity and wider tread helps the Vega hug the road in American freeway driving.

Vega is the name of one of the brightest stars visible from the earth and often is called the "arc light of the sky". The 2300 refers to the cubic centimeters displacement of the lightweight overhead cam engine which is one of the unique features of the new car.

The roomy Vega interior has vinyl-trimmed foam front bucket seats with built-in head restraints and bucket-styled foam rear seats on all models except the 1-seater. Pull-out door handles are recessed in the panels. Like the seats and door panels, the 1-piece acoustical headliner is easy to clean. The energy absorbing padded instrument panel has driver-oriented dials.

Inexpensive maintenance and ease of serviceability were major factors in the design of the Vega. Chevrolet developed for Vega owners a 112-page do-it-yourself service manual that details in picture and simple language how an owner can perform 49 service items. Bolt-on fenders can be replaced in less than 45 minutes. The grille is held in place by just five screws and can be replaced in 10 minutes without taking off the bumper. Bumper removal requires only the removal of six bolts.

Vega's most innovative feature is its new lightweight overhead cam 4-cylinder engine. In tests thus far, the Vega has been getting about 25 miles per gallon. A testing program equivalent to 240 trips around the world makes Vega 2300 one of the most well proven new cars ever to be introduced. (Adv.)

Ford's New Pinto Makes Its Debut

Pinto, Ford's new compact economy car, has made its official appearance as an answer to import cars.

With snappy appearance and big car styling, the Pinto does what some imports can't do. Pinto can run a tight circle of only 31.5 feet and that's three and a half feet less than the leading import. With a steering system that turns on a dime and an overall length of only 13½ feet, the Pinto can be parked in tiny spaces that most other cars have to pass up.

All models of the new compact may be seen at Van Steen Ford, 3030 W. College Ave., Appleton. An appointment may be made by phoning 733-6644.

The Pinto comes with a proven 4-cylinder engine, backed by over 50 million miles of consumer use and testing. It takes regular gas and it's little high-efficiency engine delivers 75 h.p., and averaged over 25 miles-per-gallon in simulated city-suburban driving.

Manual transmission is new, fully synchronized, 4-speed with the shift lever mounted on the floor. There are five main engine bearings (only four in the leading import). Brake lines are made of rustproof steel alloy.

The inside story reveals that it has over a half foot more shoulder room and three inches more front hip room than the leading import. While 44¼ inches doesn't sound very tall when you're standing up — make a door that wide and you have a main entrance.

High back buckets and full-width rear bench seat also feature easy-care, long-wear vinyl.

Of course, there are a number of pleasing options, in the Accent, Protection, Luxury Decor and Rallye Appearance groups.

To point up Pinto service simplicity, Ford has designed a special Do-It-Yourself key that can be used as a 5-way tool in an emergency. You can change the oil, clean or replace spark plugs and air-cleaner, replace fuel and oil filters, replace bulbs, adjust the parking brake and other simple adjustments.

Radio, heater and instrument panel bulbs, as well as small bulbs in outside lights can be replaced without taking apart any major assemblies. Just a few screws need to be loosened to remove the instrument panel.

Dual hydraulic brake system with warning light — Glare reduced instrument panel padding, windshield wiper arms, steering wheel hub, rearview mirror-mirror mounting and windshield pillars — Front and rear lap belts for all seating positions — Shoulder belts for front outboard occupants — Uni-Lock Harness — Energy-absorbing steering column and steering wheel — Side marker lights — Energy-absorbing armrests and safety-designed door handles — Turn indicators with lane-changing signal feature — Locking steering column and ignition key reminder buzzer (warns against leaving key in ignition) — Driver's outside rearview mirror — Inside yield away rearview mirror — Energy-absorbing instrument panel with padding — Padded sun visors — Two-speed windshield wipers — Windshield washers to clear the view — High strength laminate safety glass windshield — Double-yoke safety door latches and safety hinges — Emergency flasher — Backup lights — Energy-absorbing front seat back tops with padding — Self-locking front seat backs — Safety-designed radio control knobs, push buttons and coat hooks — Safety rim wheels and load rated tires — Corrosion-resistant brake lines — Uniform transmission shift quadrant — Parking lamps coupled with headlamps — Non-reversing odometer — Safety-design front end structure — Padded head restraints or high back seats for front outboard occupants — Safety glove box latch. Two Get Positions In Divisions of State Credit Union League

Two Kimberly men were elected to positions in Wisconsin Credit Union League divisions at a recent league convention in Milwaukee.

Alan Dietzler, Kimberly Credit Union, was elected to the board of directors of the League, Robert M. Verbeten, treasurer-manager of the Kimberly Credit Union, was elected a trustee of the new Wisconsin Credit Union Share Insurance Corp.

Representatives of the Wisconsin Credit Union League closed their 36th Annual Convention with adoption of a statement that, "Swift-moving events in the world of financial service will adversely affect state credit unions unless the law is modernized to permit them to keep pace with the times".

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

World Champions

by IRA G. CORN JR. TEAM CAPTAIN

Is it better to finesse or to play for the drop when holding 11 cards in the trump suit missing the king?

Considering only the mathematical probabilities of the suit involved, the play for the drop is superior. However, if somebody tells you that his is always the right play, ask him when he last played a bridge hand with only 11 cards!

Today's hand was played in a world championship match, The Aces vs. Norway. Each declarer went his own way in the trump suit; both with good reason.

Opening lead: King of clubs.

In the open room, North became declarer via a reasonable bidding sequence. The play was quick. The contract was assured and only an overtrick was involved. North ruffed East's second high club, crossed to his hand with the heart ace, and took the spade finesse. He reasoned that East probably held the spade king as part of his opening bid.

A different story took place in the closed room.

*Weak two bid.
Opening lead: Seven of clubs.

South's four-diamond bid was a special convention describing a hand suitable to play a major suit game. (We've been waiting for this sequence for quite some time!) North had good reason to like his hand and drove to slam, clue-bidding diamonds on the way.

Since West saw no hope in the diamond suit, he opened a club. East won the trick and naturally tried to cash the second club. South ruffed and played a diamond to the ace, surprised at East's play of the king.

East had now played an ace and two kings. This did not leave much in high cards for West, who had opened the bidding with two diamonds! Naturally, Goldman played to the ace of spades, dropping the singleton king and making his contract.

The Aces scored 980 points in the closed room and lost 450 points in the open room for a net gain of 430 points, which converts to 11 international match points.

The lesson of this hand lies not in the play of the trump suit. Two skillfull declarers played the suit in different ways. The important point is that each declarer had a reason. A good reason is always better than a percentage table.

PS. The percentage tables favor the play for the drop 52 per cent to 48 per cent.

Parents and Children

By Arnold Arnold

Pornography and Your Child

Recent public hearings on pornography and its effect on children have produced one of the usual reports that evades the real issues and that fails to distinguish between children and adults. In order to deflect the threat of repressive measures — censorship in this instance — these hearing reports often tend to lean too far the other way. It is obviously undesirable to have any form of censorship based on one person's or group's idea of what is pornographic and what is not. But it is irresponsible, for the sake of avoiding that evil, to perpetuate or to propagate other misconceptions.

Our children, this report concluded, need no shelter from literature that at best deals with complex adult problems and that at worst caters to every perversion known to man. It is impossible to draw clear dividing lines between the two. And for this reason alone, censorship from any source, no matter how well intentioned it may be, is dangerous. But it is a big step from opposing censorship of the media to endorsing any kind of literature or programming for children.

I have investigated the research and the problems connected with violence and with pornography is so far as they affect children. I have written a book on this subjtct. I found that what holds true for one, is equally valid for the other. A child reared in a predominantly violent climate will reflect these values in adolescence and adulthood. Today's child can walk into any neighborhood candy store and browse through or buy without restriction, publications that graphically illustrate every sex act and every possible depravity. He will, in fantasy if not in fact, act out what he sees and reads. It effects him detrimentally since he does not as yet have any judgment about what is permissible in human relations. Such experiences can be harmful, especially in the absence of sufficient adult guidance and explanation.

We need neither censorship nor an endorsement of pornography for children. But we do need laws that prevent violent or sexually disturbing newsstand literature from falling into children's hands without their parents' permission. Such regulation would place the burden properly on the parent — where it belongs — to judge whether any one child is sufficiently mature not to be disturbed by this literature. This kind of law would be infinitely preferable to either censorship or to condoning the exploitation of children under the guise of freedom.

Which books on baby and child care, health and education are the best and most reliable? Arnold Arnold has prepared this reading list for parents, taken from his book, Your Child and You. It includes books, pamphlets and brochures from publishers, government agencies and other sources, some free, that can help parents deal with every possible problem of childhood nurturance, health and education, ranging from pre-natal care to proper diet and remedial training. Send a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents to Arnold Arnold, ANSWERS LIST, c-o this newspaper.

Auxiliary Hears Badger State Representatives

Miss Diane Abraham, Appleton High School-West, Miss Penny Orbison, Appleton High School-East, and Miss Julie Barras, Xavier High School, agreed that the week they spent on the Madison campus as Badger Girls State participants was an invaluable experience when they spoke at the Monday evening meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary.

Also on the program was Mrs. Kenneth Lawrence of Chaminade Chorus who presented a musical program.

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Am I out of line for objecting to a kissing relationship between my dentist husband and several of his female patients — ranging from 15 to 70? He kisses them hello and good-by in his office. He also kisses them when they meet in public. I just stand there and look on and don't even know most of these women. I am eager to hear your opinion. For reasons you can guess, I must remain — Anonymous

Dear Nony: No woman should worry about the kissing her husband does in public. Obviously you have not had extensive dental work and do not know the joy and gratitude one feels when the dentist announces, "No cavities, and your gums are perfect. We'll just clean them today." I can easily understand a woman giving her dentist a smack — and have done so myself.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope the woman who signed herself "Fed Up" will read this. She complained because her husband was building their new home and talked of nothing else — morning, noon and night. He carried blueprints in his pocket and bored their friends to death.

My husband built our house and I was warned by women who had been through it that it would probably be the worst year of my life. It was. These poor guys work their heads off at a regular job. Then they run to the new place, sometimes skipping supper to get in as much work as possible before dark. They worry about whether or not the material they ordered will come in, and will it be right. Then they have nightmares about inspection officers and building codes.

My husband talked everyone's ears off for a solid year, but I let him talk and I hoped our friends would understand. Now that we are living in this beautiful home I know it was worth it. I hope the women who have this experience ahead of them will be smart enough to give their guys a pat on the back instead of a kick in the pants. — Proud Wife

Dear Proud: Thanks for writing. And now to all you gals out there who may be faced with the experience — remember: Pat the back. Don't kick the pants.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Mark Twain once said, "The holy passion of friendship is so sweet, steady, loyal and enduring that it will last through a whole lifetime — if not asked to lend money."

Sadly enough, I had to learn this lesson the hard way. I lent some money to a friend and ended up losing both the money and the friend. I prized this relationship highly and I am heartsick.

How does one say "no" and still preserve a friendship? — Closed Door

Dear Door: Friendship means coming to the rescue in time of crisis. The key word, however, is judgment.

For small "favors," say yes, but there should be limits even here. If the friend has repeatedly failed to repay previous small amounts the answer should be, "Sorry — no more."

For a sizable loan, the best answer is, "I'll go with you to the bank and help you get a loan." You could still get stuck, but your chances are vastly better than if you simply hand over your own money. The friend who gets angry when you want your money returned was no friend to begin with. You lose nothing when you lose the friendship of a deadbeat.

Give in or lose him . . . when a guy gives you this line, look out! For tips on how to handle the super sex salesman, check Ann Landers. Read her booklet, "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?"
